PART I

COMPANIES UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE

A.—MEN'S COMPANIES

I

3, PRINCESS ELIZABETH'S COMPANY

When the 2, Queen's Revels and the 1, Princess Elizabeth's companies united in March, 1613, those men who were not included in the new company seem to have joined forces and travelled under the management of Nicholas Long, calling themselves the Princess Elizabeth's players.[1] On April 19, 1613, they appeared at Norwich, and during the year at Coventry, Shrewsbury, Bristol, Marlborough, Canterbury, Dover, and Leicester. After May 31, they probably used as their licence an exemplification or duplicate of the licence granted to John Townsend, Joseph Moore, and their fellows on April 27, 1611.[2]

During 1614 and 1615 this company continued to act in the provincial towns. On March 2, 1614, they appeared under Nicholas Long at Norwich. When the Mayor's Court demanded why they had come to that city, they replied, 'not to aske leave to play But to aske the gratuetie of the Cytty.'[3] The only conceivable reason for such humility on this company's part was their fear that the Mayor's Court would not accept their licence, probably the duplicate of the 1611 licence, dated May 31, 1613.[1] There is no record of their receiving the reward they asked for. In March, 1615, this company visited Coventry, where they were not allowed to play because it was Lent. Apparently the corporation wrote to Lord Coke to find out if they were justified in refusing permission to play to the Princess Elizabeth's men. His reply, dated March 28, 1615, upheld them in their decision.[2] This company was probably disbanded late in 1615 or early in 1616.[3]

2, PALSGRAVE'S COMPANY

During 1615, or early in 1616, Charles Marshall, Humphrey Jeffes, and William Parr of the Pals-grave's company secured a duplicate of the company's licence, collected a company, and travelled in the provinces. On July 16, 1616, the Earl of Pembroke issued an order to the officials of the provincial towns, commanding them, if this company appeared in their city, to take its duplicate licence, send it to London, and take bonds of the members of the company to appear before him at Whitehall. Such strenuous measures, no doubt, caused the company to break up, as there are no further traces of it.[1]

III

2, CHILDREN OF BRISTOL

Apparently about 1616-7, John Daniel's Children of Bristol and Martin Slater's Queen's company amalgamated, with the result that the new company was composed largely of men. As they continued to use Daniel's Patent for a boy's company, this led to protests from the provincial authorities, and about April, 1618, they were forced to apply for a new form of authorisation. This was granted them in the shape of a 'Letter of Assistance,' which commanded the provincial cities to 'suffer Martin Slatier, John Edmonds and Nathaniell Clay (her Maties servants) with their Associatts, the bearers hereof, to play . . . (as her Maties servants of her Royall Chamber of Bristol) in all Playhouses, Townehalls, Schoolehouses and other places convenient for the purpose, in all Citties, Universities, Townes, and Burroughes within his Maties Realmes and Dominions, . . . (they or any of them having to showe his Lrs Patents, and a Letter of Assignment from the said John Daniell).'[1] The further conditions imposed on the company were that they should behave in an orderly manner, should not stay in one place above fourteen days, and not play at times of divine service on Sabbath days.

But even this authorisation was not sufficient for some of the town authorities, and in June, 1618, Ignatius Jurdain, Mayor of Exeter, wrote to Sir Thomas Lake, Under Secretary, that he had refused to allow Daniel's company to play in Exeter because their Patent was only for children, whereas most of them were men, there being only 'five youths' among them. He also stated that he had given them a gratuity of four angels, with which they seemed satisfied, but later on, hearing that they intended to write to the Privy Council about the matter he determined to write first. He was, he said, content they should play if such were their Lordship's pleasure, 'although those who spend their money on plays are ordinarily very poor people.'[2] How the matter turned out is unknown. There are no further traces of the company among the Exeter records. It probably broke up soon after this.[3]

IV

2, KING JAMES I.'s COMPANY

There is no evidence of the existence of a provincial King's company till 1622, when Richard Errington appeared at Norwich as the manager of a King's company.[1] As Errington is never mentioned in the lists of the King's London company there can be little doubt that this company was a provincial one. Errington's company must have been formed after 1616, for in the order of suppression of that date, the King's does not appear among those companies who had a provincial as well as a London company.[2] There is nothing to indicate at exactly what time between 1616 and 1622 Errington's company was formed; consequently I have dated it c. 1622 when it is first definitely heard of.[3] Shortly after the accession of Charles I. in 1625, this company seems to have amalgamated with the 2, Red Bull-2, King Charles's company.[4]

[1] Cf. below, Provincial Visits. [2] Ibid., 343-344.

[3] At first sight the appearances of the King's men at Coventry on Jan. 10, 1620, at Leicester before Feb. 20, 1621, and at Dover [c. April, 1622], might be taken to refer to Errington's provincial company. In any other year but 1619-20 the King's London would certainly have been near the Court on Jan. 10, but on account of the Queen's death in 1619 there were no plays at Court during Christmas, 1619-20. For Christmas, 1620-21, we have no record of plays at Court, and Feb. 2 is the date of the last Court performance in 1621-2. So there is nothing in these dates against the supposition that it was a part of the King's London company, which visited Coventry Leicester, and Dover during 1620, 1621, and 1622.

THE KING'S PLAYERS OF YORK

On September 18, 1629, William Perry was granted a commission 'for making up and keeping a company of players, to present all usual stage plays, by the name of His Majesty's servants for the city of York.'[1] This project cannot have been carried through, however, for nothing more is heard of such a company, and on Nov. 10, 1629, Perry obtained a new licence as manager of the Red Bull-King's company, with which players he was connected for many years.[2]

VI

6, KING'S REVELS COMPANY

On November 28, 1634, the Master of the Revels granted a licence to William Daniel, William Hart, John Townsend, Samuel Minion, Hugh Haughton, Thomas Dutton or Doughton, and others, not exceeding in number fifteen persons.[3] This company appeared at Coventry in June, and at Norwich on Sept. 3, 1635. From the records of April 22, 1636, at Coventry,[1] and 1636-7 at Gloucester,[2] we learn that this was a new King's Revels company. By April 22, 1636, Richard Errington had joined these men from Queen Henrietta's provincial company.[3] During 1637 those of the London King's Revels company who did not unite with the Queen's players may have joined these men, who continued to act in the provinces till 1639.

B.—CHILDREN'S COMPANIES

I

2, CHILDREN OF THE KING'S REVELS COMPANY[1]

On February 27, 1615, William Hovell, William Perry, Nathan May and others obtained a player's licence, 'signed wth the kyngs hande wth the privy signet affixed.'[2] This company was, in all probability, a 2, King's Revels Children company, for on July 16, 1616, the Earl of Pembroke, when ordering the suppression of William Perry's company, stated that it passed 'under the name and title of the Children of his Ma^ts^ Revels.'[3] As there are no further references to a King's Revels company for a couple of years, and Perry appeared as a Queen's Revels man in 1617, there can be little doubt that Pembroke's order was carried out. Nothing is heard of these players in London, and their only recorded provincial appearance is at Norwich on June 17, 1615.[4]

II

3, CHILDREN OF THE KING'S REVELS COMPANY

There can be little doubt that by 1618 a company of King's Revels players again existed, for during that year a payment of ten shillings was made to 'the Children of the Revells' in Leicester, and immediately afterwards a similar payment to 'one other Companye of Playors called the Children of the Revells,'[1] and as one of these companies was undoubtedly the 4, Queen's Revels,[2] the other was probably a new King's Revels company. Most likely it was this company which appeared in Bristol in 1618 as 'Sir George Buck's players.'[3] In September, 1619, they acted at Nottingham under their full name 'the Children of the Kinges Revelles.'[4] During 1621-22 a company called by the Chamberlain 'the King's Players,' visited Canterbury under the leadership of William Daniel.[5] As Daniel is nowhere else mentioned as connected with the King's players, but later appeared as a King's Revels man, the probabilities are that this company was the King's Revels players. On June 14, 1623, Nicholas Hansen, one of a company of players, presented a licence dated May 28, 1622, to the Norwich Mayor's Court on behalf of his company.[6] The name of these players is not given, but as Hansen is later spoken of as a King's Revels man[7] and is never connected with any other company, it seems likely that this company was the 3, King's Revels. If so, they must have obtained a new licence on May 28, 1622. It appears then that the 3, King's Revels company contained among its principal members William Daniell, and Nicholas Hansen.

[4] Ibid., 340.

Until 1628 the 3, King's Revels company is occasionally met with in the provinces, but never in London. About that time it probably broke up, for after 1628 none of its members are mentioned for several years, and in 1629 a new King's Revels company containing entirely new actors appeared.[1] Whether the 3, King's Revels company consisted of boys or men there is nothing to indicate except its name, which suggests that it was mainly made up of boys.

5, CHILDREN OF THE KING'S REVELS COMPANY[1]

When, in 1629, the London King's Revels company was formed to occupy Salisbury Court Theatre, a new provincial King's Revels company was also organised. On Dec. 30, 1629, a licence was granted by the Master of the Revels to Robert Kimpton or Kempston, Nathaniel Clay, Thomas Holman, and others.[2] This licence they presented at Reading soon afterwards, and though the name of the company is not mentioned, it is known to have been the Children of the King's Revels, for on Sept. 23, 1631, Robert Kimpton and John Carr are mentioned at Coventry as players of the Revels,[3] and there is no Queen's Revels company heard of after 1629. On Sept. 8, 1632, this company, still under the leadership of Robert Kimpton, visited Norwich and were allowed to play two days.[4] After this nothing is heard of them.

IV

I

On July 10, 1615, Sir George Buck wrote to the Secretary of Lord Chamberlain Somerset, that the King at the Queen's mediation, had given permission to Samuel Daniel to make up 'a company of youths to perform comedies and tragedies at Bristol, under the name of the Youths of Her Majesty's Royal Chamber of Bristol.' To this Buck said he had agreed, as it was 'without prejudice to the rights of his office.'[1] Afterwards it was decided that John Daniel, who was a musician in the service of Prince Charles, should take his brother's place as manager of this company, and, accordingly, when the licence was issued on July 17, it was made out to John Daniel. This licence permitted the company to play not only in Bristol, but in all provincial towns.[2]

In 1616-17 these players visited Norwich, but were not allowed to play though given a gratuity.[3]

II

In all probability the 2, Children of Bristol company broke up about 1618, Slater and his men reappearing under their old title of Queen Anne's players, and a [1] Cal. State Papers, 1611-1619. [2] Ibid., June 1618.

[3] Cf. below, 370.

new company of Bristol boys being formed by Daniel. The evidence for this is that on Dec. 6, 1618, Martin Slater visited Ludlow as the manager of 'the Queen's Players,' the title thereafter borne by his company till 1625,[1] whereas after 1621-22, when the next certain reference to the Bristol boys is found, they are termed King's players, apparently having been taken under the King's patronage after Queen Anne's death in March, 1619.[2] This patronage they retained till 1624, when they entered Prince Charles's service, being spoken of in Leicester on Oct. 22, 1624, as 'The Princes servants, goeing by the name of the Youths of Bristowe.'[3] After 1624 all traces of this company are lost.

NOBLEMEN AND COMMONERS' COMPANIES

A.—GREATER MEN'S COMPANIES

I

1, 2, LORD ABERGAVENNY'S COMPANIES

I

A COMPANY of players under the patronage of a Lord Abergavenny, first appeared in 1570-71, when they played at Dover, Canterbury, and Leicester. Their patron was Henry Nevill, Lord Abergavenny, 1535 to 1587.[1] Until 1575-6 this company often performed in the provinces. As they are not heard of after this for about thirty years, they no doubt broke up or passed under other patronage about 1575-6.

II

In 1609-10 a new Lord Abergavenny's company visited Coventry. At this time Edward Nevill was Lord Abergavenny. This company is not again mentioned.

[1] Henry Nevill had also a bearward in his patronage, for in the Dover Records for 1562-3 occurs a payment of 3s. 4d. to the Lord Abergavenny's bearward (cf. below, 260).

1, 2, 4, EARL OF ARUNDEL'S COMPANIES

I

The Earls of Arundel seem to have patronised minstrels and players from very early times, for in 1475 a company of minstrels bearing the Earl of Arundel's name appeared in Rye,[1] and in 1480 both minstrels and players performed at Lydd under the same title.[2] At this time William Fitz-Alan was Earl of Arundel. From 1480 to the accession of Elizabeth, occasional references to the Earl of [1] Hist. MSS. Com., v. 495. [2] Ibid., v. 527.

Arundel's players are found in the provincial records.[1]

II

When Elizabeth came to the throne, Henry Fitz-Alan was Earl of Arundel. He had succeeded to the title in January, 1544; but does not seem to have had a company of players in his patronage till 1561, when a company acted at Canterbury under his name. In the autumn of the following year they acted at Canterbury and Dover. As nothing further is heard of an Earl of Arundel's company till 1584, the company of 1562 most likely disbanded before the death of their patron in 1580.

III

The fourth company,[2] under the patronage of an Earl of Arundel, appeared at Leicester on Feb. 20, 1610. On that occasion the city authorities refused them licence to act, but granted them a reward of ten shillings. The patron of these players was Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, who was restored in blood and succeeded to the title in 1604. He died in 1646. When this company came under his patronage, or how long it lasted, is uncertain. The only mention of the company is in 1610 at Leicester.

[1] In 1498-9 an Earl of Arundel's company acted at New Romney (Hist. MSS. Com., v. 549). At this time Thomas Fitz-Alan was Earl of Arundel, which title he held till October, 1524. In 1519 his 'four interludes' acted at Shrewsbury (History of Shrewsbury, Owen and Blakeney, 328), and in 1523-4 at Southampton (cf. below, 22). After the death of Thomas Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, in Oct., 1524, his players probably passed under the patronage of his successor, William Fitz-Alan, for in 1525-6 the Earl of Arundel's players appeared at Southampton (cf. below, 22). Their next appearance is on Sept. 29, 1542, at Norwich (cf. below, 22). In January, 1544, William Fitz-Alan died, and his company was probably disbanded, as nothing further is heard of an Earl of Arundel's company till 1561, when Henry Fitz-Alan was Earl of Arundel.

[2] The 3, Arundel company was a London company, cf. i. 322.

1, 2, EARL OF BATH'S COMPANIES

I

The first mention of an Earl of Bath's company of players occurs in the Bristol records for November, 1542. At that time, John Bourchier was Earl of Bath. This company again appeared at Bristol on July 27, 1543. As nothing more is heard of an Earl of Bath's company for over twenty-five years, the company of 1542-3 must have disbanded or sought a new patron soon after that date.

II

In 1570 a new Earl of Bath's company visited Dover. These players were under the patronage of William Bourchier, Earl of Bath from 1561 to 1623. Until 1578-9 this company frequently appeared in the provinces. After that year they are not heard of.[1] In 1577, when this company visited Southampton, it contained eleven players.[2] In the autumn of 1578 they acted a play called Quid pro quo, at Bristol.[3] There is no record of this company performing in London or at Court.

[1] In 1588 the following entry occurs in the Tavistock records: 'Itm. paide to Three Iryshemen whiche had a lycence from the Earell of Bathe—vid.' (Calendar of the Tavistock Parish Records, ed. R. N. Worth, 1887). Whether or not these men were players of some kind there is nothing to show.

LORD BEAUCHAMP'S COMPANY

In 1586 a company styling themselves the Lord Beauchamp's players, appeared at Faversham. As Edward Seymour, the eldest son of Sir Edward Seymour, Baron Beauchamp and Earl of Hertford, was styled Lord Beauchamp from his birth in Sept., 1561, till his death in July, 1613, this company was undoubtedly under his patronage.[1] From 1586 to Dec., 1597, this company frequently appeared in the provinces. In June, 1590, the following interesting entry concerning them is found in the Norwich Mayor's Court Books: 'This day John Mufford one of the Ld Beauchaumps players being forbidden by Mr Maio^r^ to playe w^t^in the libties of this Citie and in respect thereof gave them among them xx^s^ and yett notw^th^standing they did sett up bills to pvoke men to come to their playe and did playe in Xxe Churche. Therefor the seid John Mufford is comytted to prison.'[2] How long John Mufford remained in prison there is nothing to show. The Norwich authorities do not seem to have borne Lord Beauchamp's men any ill-will for thus disobeying their commands, for they allowed this company to play in Norwich on April 10, 1595, and on Dec. 4, 1596, they permitted the companies of Lord Willoughby and Lord Beauchamp, who were acting together, to play in the city, on condition that they behaved themselves well and kept 'mete & convenient howers.'[3] No further details are known about the construction of this company. It did not appear in London or at Court.

[1] Commenting on the appearance of Lord Beauchamp's players in Shrewsbury in 1590-1, Owen and Blakeney state that this company was under the patronage of Sir Edward Seymour, Baron Beauchamp, and Earl of Hertford (History of Shrewsbury, Owen and Blakeney, 394). As Sir Edward Seymour bore the title Earl of Hertford from Jan., 1559, till April, 1621, his players would almost certainly have appeared under that name, and not as Lord Beauchamp's players.

1, 2, LORD BERKELEY'S COMPANIES

I

The first appearance of a Lord Berkeley's company of players was in 1556-7 at Bristol. At this time Henry Berkeley was Lord Berkeley, a title which he held till his death on Nov. 26, 1613. As nothing more is heard of a Lord Berkeley's company for over twenty years, the company of 1556-7 probably broke up or sought another patron soon after that date.

II

In 1577-8 a new Lord Berkeley's company acted at Bath, Bristol, Gloucester, and Coventry. These players are frequently mentioned in the provinces till 1610. In 1581 they acted in London, for in that year Lord Henry Berkeley wrote to the Lord Mayor on behalf of his players who were in prison for playing on the Sabbath, contrary to the Mayor's orders, which were unknown to them.[1] Lord Berkeley had also a band of musicians in his patronage, and these sometimes travelled with his players. While Lord Berkeley's men were playing at Faversham in 1596-7, ' " Certen persons " were guilty of a " misdemeanoure done in the Towne vppon misusage of a wagon or coache of the Lo. Bartlettes [Berkeley's] players." The " certen persons " were fined " xvs. ixd." '[2] After 1610 these players are mentioned neither in London nor in the provinces.

LORD CHANDOS'S COMPANIES

The first appearance of a company of players under the patronage of a Lord Chandos, was at Dover in 1577-8. At that time Giles Brydges was Baron Chandos. From 1577-8 till February, 1594, when their patron died, this company acted frequently in the provinces. They must have been popular, for in 1591 another company thought it worth while to assume, without licence, the title, Lord Chandos's men. This happened at Norwich, where on September 22, a company calling themselves Lord Chandos's men acted and received a reward of 10s. from the town Chamberlain. Soon after, the real Chandos company arrived in Norwich, showed their licence, proclaimed the former company a counterfeit, and received a reward of 20s. at Mr. Mayor's commandment.[1]

When Giles Brydges, Lord Chandos, died, on Feb. 21, 1594, his company passed immediately under the patronage of his successor, William Brydges, for they appeared as Lord Chandos's men at Coventry and Gloucester in 1594-5. On July 19, 1600, they acted at Coventry and received a reward of 10s. Either just before or after this performance they quarrelled with the town authorities and were imprisoned 'for their contempt agaynst Mr Maior & ther remayned untill they made their submisshon.'[3]

On Nov. 18, 1602, William Brydges died and his successor, Grey Brydges, Lord Chandos, took the company under his patronage. From 1602 till 1610 these men acted frequently in the provinces. After [1] Cf. below, 367. In addition to his regular company of players, this Lord Chandos had in his patronage a bearward and a company of puppet-players. The former appeared at Coventry in 1573-4, 1579-80, and at Plymouth in 1580-1; the latter at Gloucester on June 30, 1590 (cf. below, 236, 237, 284, 384).

[2] Cf. below, 242.

1610 nothing further is heard of them, so they must have disbanded or sought some other patron.

The only actor whose connection with Lord Chandos's players can be traced is Robert Armin. In 1604, he prefixed a dedicatory letter to Gilbert Dugdale's True Discourse on the Poisoning of Thomas Caldwell.'[2] This letter he addressed, 'To the right honourable and his singular good lady, the Lady Mary Chandois, R.A. wisheth health and everlasting happiness.' Lady Mary Chandos was the widow of William Brydges, Baron Chandos, who died on Nov. 18, 1602. In this same letter Armin says, 'Your good honour knows Puick's poor heart, who, in all my service to your late deceased lord, never savoured of flattery or fiction &c.' That Armin's service to Lord Chandos had been as a player, there can be little doubt, for in his story of 'How Jack Miller the cleane foole, ventred ouer the Severne on foot in great danger,' he seems to identify himself with 'Lord Shandayes Players.'[2]

When Armin joined Lord Chandos's men it is impossible to say. Born, probably, about 1568, his interest in the stage was first excited by Tarleton who, before 1588, had capped the 'boy's' verses

[2] Fool upon Fool, or Six Sorts of Sots, 1605, republished 1608 as A Nest of Ninnies, etc. (O. S. S. Pub., 1824, 37-38). The story runs that Lord Chandos's players came to the town of 'Esam' in 'Worcestersh,' and Jack Millar loved the clown whom he called 'Grumball.' When the players were leaving 'Esam,' Jack Millar, in his eagerness to reach his beloved 'Grumball,' crossed the Severn which was thinly frozen over, to his great danger. Possibly Armin was the 'Gentlewoman boy' who pulled Jack Millar out of the oven by the heels, while the players (i.e. possibly Chandos's men) were performing at the 'Gentleman's house' (Nest of Ninnies, etc., O. S. S., 1824, 35-36).

on Charles, the poor keeper of a tavern in Gracechurch Street, and had named him his successor in comic parts. The result of this was that the boy 'so loved Tarlton after, that regarding him with more respect, he used to his plays, and fell in a league with his humour: and private practice brought him to present playing, and at this hour performs the same, where, at the Globe on the Bankside, men may see him.' As the Second Part of Tarleton's Jests, from which the above quotation is taken, was published about August, 1600,[1] it is evident that by that time Armin had left Chandos's men for the Strange-Chamberlain company, which occupied the Globe. The exact date of his leaving Chandos's men is impossible to fix.

1, 3, LORD CLINTON, EARL OF LINCOLN'S COMPANIES [1]

I

The earliest mention of a company of players under the patronage of a Lord Clinton is in 1548-9, at Plymouth, when a company called 'the lord deputy of Bollogne's players' performed there. As Edward Clinton, Lord Clinton, was Governor of Boulogne from 1547 to 1550 the reference is, no doubt, to his company. There are no further records of this company.

II

The third Clinton company appeared in the provinces from 1599 to 1608-9. Its patron was Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln from 1585 to 1616. It was always called the Earl of Lincoln's company.

1, 2, LORD COMPTON'S COMPANIES

I

A Lord Compton's company of players first appeared in 1573, when they visited Abingdon and Bristol. Their patron, Henry Compton, had been created Lord Compton on May 8, 1572. It was probably soon after receiving this dignity that he took a company of players into his patronage. Until 1577-8 these men often acted in the provinces. As no Lord Compton's company appeared for about twenty-seven years after 1577-8, this company, no doubt, disbanded or passed under other patronage about that date.

II

In 1605 a new Lord Compton's company acted at Coventry. At that time William Compton was Lord Compton. This company is not again mentioned.[1]

[1] In 1611 Lord Compton's father-in-law, Sir John Spencer, died and left his vast fortune to Lady Compton. Pym in his MS. Journal (Hist. MSS. Com., x. App. vii. 84) states that 'at the first coming to his great estate Lord Compton within less than eight weeks spent £72,000, most in great horses, rich saddles and plays.'

IX

1, 2, LORD CROMWELL'S COMPANIES

I

Soon after Thomas Cromwell was created Baron Cromwell on July 9, 1536, he seems to have taken into his patronage a company of players, who appeared under his name at Cambridge in 1537-8. In June, 1540, Thomas Cromwell was attainted and all his honours forfeited, and on July 28, he was executed. His players must have then disbanded or passed under other patronage.[1]

II

In 1600 a new Lord Cromwell's company acted at Norwich and Bristol. Its patron was Edward Cromwell, Baron Cromwell, from Nov. 20, 1592 to April 27, 1607. Nothing more is heard of this company.

[1] Occasionally this company seems to have acted from 1536 to 1540 under the title, 'the Lord Privy Seal's men' (cf. Provincial Visits).

1, 2, LORD DARCY'S COMPANIES

I

The earliest appearance of a company of players, under the patronage of a Lord Darcy, was, in January, 1578, at Nottingham. At this time John Darcy held the title. His 'players and musicians' performed at Doncaster on December 26, 1578, and his players alone in the same city during the next year.[1] As these players are not again mentioned for about twelve years, they probably disbanded or sought a new patron about 1579.

II

In 1591 a new Lord Darcy's company visited Coventry and Leicester. Their patron was probably John Darcy, who seems to have inherited the title from his father in 1587.[2] This company is frequently mentioned in the provinces till 1602-3. It appears to have been an especial favourite in Coventry, visiting that city nearly every year. In 1593 it joined forces with Lord Ogle's men for a

1, 3, EARL OF DERBY'S COMPANIES

I

The first company of players to appear under the patronage of an Earl of Derby in the sixteenth century visited Cambridge in 1532-3.[1] Its patron was Edward Stanley, Earl of Derby from May 23, 1521, to Oct. 14, 1572.[2] As this company is not heard of after 1537-8, it probably disbanded or passed under other patronage about that time.

II

From 1572 to 1593, Henry Stanley was Earl of Derby. After the breaking up of his first company (a London company) about 1582-3 he seems to have had no players under his patronage till 1592, when a third Derby company appeared at Ipswich, where they acted with the Lord Admiral's men, and at Shrewsbury. There are no records of this company in London. On Sept. 25, 1593, Henry Stanley died and his players were forced to seek a new patron.[3]

[1] The Stanleys seem to have been interested in players before this. As early as 1495 a payment of 6s. 8d. was made by the Shrewsbury authorities to 'the Earl of Derby's players' (Devlin, Helps to Hereford History, 71). At that time Thomas Stanley was Earl of Derby. Nothing more is heard of a Derby company till 1532-3.

[2] Edward Stanley had also a company of musicians in his patronage. They appeared at Craven in 1525 (cf. below, 255).

1, 2, MARQUIS AND EARL OF DORSET'S COMPANIES

I

The first appearance of a dramatic company under the patronage of a Marquis of Dorset, was at Bristol in July, 1537. At this time Henry Grey was Marquis of Dorset, a title which he held till Oct. 11, 1551, when he was created Duke of Suffolk. His players appeared again in 1540 at Plymouth, after which they are not heard of in the provinces, though they existed as late as June 21, 1551, on which date the Privy Council wrote to the Marquis of Dorset, 'signifying license to be granted, for to have his players, play only in his lordship's presence.'[1] This is the last time the company is mentioned.[2]

II

In 1610-11, an Earl of Dorset's company acted at Coventry. Its patron was Richard Sackville, who was Earl of Dorset, from Feb. 10, 1609, to March 28, 1624. This company is not again heard of.

LORD EDWARD DUDLEY'S COMPANY

The earliest mention of a dramatic company under the patronage of Lord Edward Dudley[1] is on

[1] Lord Edward Dudley, alias Sutton, was the son of Edward Dudley, alias Sutton, Lord Dudley, by his second wife, the Lady Jane, daughter of February 16, 1595, when a warrant was granted by him, 'to Francis Coffyn and Rich. Bradshaw, his servants, to travel in the quality of playing and to use music in all cities, towns and corporations.' This warrant requested 'for them the use of the Town Hall or other place and countenance,' and allowed them to play 'except during time of Divine Service.'[1] From this time till about 1636, Lord Edward Dudley seems to have retained a company of players.

Bradshaw and Coffin had probably left Lord Edward Dudley's company by 1610, for on March 13 of that year, one Distle or Distley is mentioned in the Shuttleworth accounts of Gawthorpe and Smithils in Lancashire, as the head player of a company which in 1612 is spoken of in the same accounts as Lord Edward Dudley's.[2] Whatever became of Coffin, who is not again heard of, Bradshaw, most likely, set up another company, for in 1630 he acted at Reading as the head player of a company whose patron is not named. As Distle or Distley and his company appeared at Leicester in 1629, and it is highly improbable that Lord Edward Dudley had two companies after 1610, there can be little doubt Edward, Earl of Derby. He was born in 1567, and matriculated at Oxford in July, 1580. His life was dissipated, and his estates were only saved by the timely marriage of his granddaughter and heiress, to Humble Ward, son of William Ward, a wealthy goldsmith of London and jeweller to Queen Elizabeth. He married Theodosia, daughter of Sir James Harington, of Exton, co. Rutland. He died on June 23, 1643.

[1] Cf. below, 234. It was probably for this company that Richard Bradshaw bought one pound and two ounces of copper lace from Philip Henslowe on Dec. 15, 1600 (Diary, ed. Greg, 133). On April 29, 1601, he borrowed five shillings from Henslowe (Diary, ed. Greg, 133). There is no reason to connect Bradshaw with Francis Henslowe's company as Mr. Fleay does (Stage, 139).

[2] See below, 394.

that after 1610 Bradshaw was not a servant of Lord Edward Dudley.[1]

Though Lord Edward Dudley's company did not appear in London, it is frequently mentioned in the provinces from 1595 to about 1636.

[1] For a further account of Bradshaw and company after 1610, cf. below, 106 f.

LORD EVERS'S COMPANY

From 1600-1 to 1613, a company of players, under the patronage of Ralph Evers, Lord Evers, frequently acted in the provinces. After 1607 this company is often called the 'Lord President's players,' as their patron had been appointed Lord President of the Council of Wales in that year. After 1613 this company is not mentioned.[1] [1] Lord Evers had also a company of musicians in his patronage. They performed at Coventry in 1610-11 (cf. below, 245).

LORD FITZWALTER—1, EARL OF SUSSEX—1, LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S COMPANY

In the records of Thetford Priory occurs the entry of a visit of Lord and Lady Fitzwa[l]ter's players, probably between 1525 and 1529.[1] At this time Robert Radclyffe was Lord Fitzwalter. On Dec. 8, 1529, he was created Earl of Sussex, and his players became the Earl of Sussex's men. Their first appearance under this title was at Cambridge in 1538-9. On August 3, 1540, the Earl of Sussex became Lord Chamberlain. From this time till his death on Nov. 27, 1542, his players appeared both as the Earl of Sussex's and the Lord Chamberlain's men.

[1] Cf. below, 46.

Robert Radclyffe was succeeded by his son, Henry Radclyffe. He continued the Sussex patronage to his father's players, for in 1543-4 the Earl of Sussex's men played at Norwich. Until Feb., 1556, there are occasional notices of this company in the provinces. On Feb. 17, 1557, Henry Radclyffe died, and as nothing is heard of an Earl of Sussex's company till 1568-9 these players probably dispersed.[1]

[1] For 2, Fitzwalter-Sussex-Chamb. company, cf. i. 301.

[1] Cf. below, 403. Collier, from whom this entry is taken, dates it 1-31 Henry VIII., i.e. 1509-1540. If, as seems most likely, the company referred to was under the patronage of Robert Radclyffe, it must be dated as above. If under the patronage of his son, Henry Radclyffe, styled Lord Fitzwalter, 1529-1540, it must have been another company and would date between 1529 and 1540. The latter supposition seems unlikely, as this is the only reference to such a company, and there are several notices of a Robert Radclyffe's company.

1, 2, SIR GEORGE HASTINGS, EARL OF HUNTINGDON'S COMPANIES

I

A company of players, under the patronage of Sir George Hastings, first appeared in 1582-3 at Leicester. Between this date and 1588 these players acted several times in the provinces. As they are not heard of after 1588 for nine years, they, in all probability, broke up or sought a new patron about 1588.

II

On December 14, 1595, Sir George Hastings became Earl of Huntingdon.[1] Soon after he again took a company of players into his patronage, for in 1596-7 a company bearing his name acted at Norwich, Coventry, and Leicester. From this time till December, 1604, when the Earl died, this company frequently played in the provinces.

[1] The previous Earl of Huntingdon, Henry Hastings, had a bearward, by name George Ward, in his patronage, but apparently no players, cf. below, 237; Kelly's Notices of Leicester, 215.

Immediately after his death, his players passed under the patronage of Henry Hastings, the new Earl of Huntingdon, for on Jan. 19, 1605, they acted as his servants at Leicester. However, they did not long remain in the new Earl's patronage, as, after 1605-6 no Earl of Huntingdon's players are heard of.[1] Whether they disbanded or passed under other patronage there is nothing to show.

[1] On Jan. 18, 1608, a son was born to the Earl of Huntingdon, and was styled Lord Hastings. By April, 1608, the Earl seems to have granted this baby's patronage to a band of musicians, for on April 18 the musicians of the 'Young Lord Hastings' played at Leicester (cf. Kelly's Leicester, 278).

LORD WILLIAM HOWARD'S COMPANY

From 1599 to 1603 William Howard, the eldest son of Lord Charles Howard, the Lord High Admiral, and Earl of Nottingham, had a company of players under his patronage. They were known as the Lord Howard's players, their patron being styled Lord Howard from 1596 till his death on Nov. 25, 1615.

1, LORD HUNSDON'S COMPANY

A Lord Hunsdon's company of players appeared for the first time in 1564-5, when they acted at Norwich, Leicester, and Plymouth. At this time Henry Carey was Lord Hunsdon. This company continued to visit the provinces till 1566-7, when it probably broke up, as nothing more is heard of a Lord Hunsdon's company for many years.[1]

1, 2, LORD LISLE—2, EARL OF LEICESTER'S COMPANIES[1]

I

A company of players, under the patronage of a Lord Lisle, first appeared in 1526-7, at Southampton. The company then numbered five men.[2] Their patron was Arthur Plantagenet, an illegitimate son of Edward IV., who was created Viscount Lisle on April 23, 1523, and held that title till his death on March 3, 1542. From c. July, 1536, till 1539-40, he was Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports.[3] This company probably disbanded or sought another patron soon after 1537, when they are last mentioned.

II

In 1610-11 a Lord Lisle's company performed at Coventry. Its patron was Robert Sydney, who was created Viscount Lisle on May 4, 1605. He retained this title till Aug. 2, 1618, when he was created Earl of Leicester. As no company is heard of in the patronage of Robert Sydney for twenty-seven years after 1610-11, there can be little doubt that the company of 1610-11, if it continued to exist, did not do so under his patronage.

III

In 1637 a new company under the patronage of Robert Sydney, Earl of Leicester, acted with Lord Goring's men at Leicester. Soon after the company must have broken up, for on January 9, 1640, a composite company, including George Corden, servant to the Earl of Leicester, and some of Lord Goring's and Lord Clifford's men,[1] acted at Coventry. After this nothing is heard of any Earl of Leicester's players.

1, 2, LORD MONTAGU'S COMPANIES

I

The first company under the patronage of a Lord Montagu, appeared at Leicester in 1574-5, and at Bath in 1577-8. In all probability, the company then disbanded or sought a new patron. The Lord Montagu of the time was Sir Anthony Browne, who held the title till Oct. 19, 1592.

II

In 1592-3, a company in the patronage of Anthony Maria Browne, Viscount Montagu from Oct. 19, 1592, to Oct. 22, 1629, visited Leicester and Bath, and in 1594-5, Coventry. Nothing more is known of this company.

LORD MORLEY'S COMPANY

A Lord Morley's company of players first appeared in 1581-2, when they acted at Canterbury, Ipswich, Southampton, Gloucester, and Coventry. From this year until 1601-2 Lord Morley's men are frequently mentioned in the provincial records. In 1582-3 they acted with Lord Hunsdon's men at Bristol,[1] and in 1592-3 with the Earl of Derby's men at Southampton.[2] Their patron was Edward Parker, Lord Morley from 1577 to 1618. He married Elizabeth, heiress of William Stanley, Lord Mounteagle. This nobleman died in 1581, and in all probability, it was his company of players which appeared in 1581-2, under the patronage of his son-in-law, Lord Morley.[3]

1, 2, LORD MOUNTEAGLE'S COMPANIES

I

THE first appearance of a company of players under the patronage of a Lord Mounteagle, was in 1568-9, when such a company visited Ipswich. At that time William Stanley was Lord Mounteagle. His players are frequently heard of in the provinces till 1581, when he died, and his company most likely passed under the patronage of his son-in-law, Edward Parker, Lord Morley.[1]

II

In 1592-3, a new Lord Mounteagle's company visited Southampton. The patron of this company was probably William Parker, son of Edward Parker, Lord Morley, and Elizabeth, daughter of William Stanley, Lord Mounteagle, who, on her father's death, in 1581, became Baroness Mounteagle, for, though he was not summoned to Parliament as Lord Mounteagle till March 19, 1604, after his mother's death, he was very likely styled Lord Mounteagle before that. This company, often appeared in the provincial towns till 1615-16, when it finally disappeared.

1, 2, LORD MOUNTJOY'S COMPANIES

I

The first notice of players under the patronage of a Lord Mountjoy occurs at Plymouth in 1564-5. At the time James Blount was Baron Mountjoy. These men frequently acted in the provinces till 1577-8. About 1581 their patron died, and they seem to have passed under the patronage of his son and successor, William Blount, for in 1582-3 they appeared in Coventry. As nothing is heard of a Lord Mountjoy's players after this for about seventeen years, the company of 1564-5–1582-3 probably disbanded or sought another patron about the latter date.

II

In 1598-9 a Lord Mountjoy's company is again heard of at Plymouth. These men were under the patronage of Charles Blount, Baron Mountjoy, from July, 1594, to July, 1603, and Earl of Devonshire from July, 1603, to April 3, 1606. The only other appearance of this company was in 1605-6 at Coventry. Although their patron was at the time Earl of Devonshire they acted as Lord Mountjoy's players. Nothing more is known concerning this company.

1, 2, [3], DUKE OF NORFOLK'S COMPANIES

I

A Duke of Norfolk's company of players appeared at Norwich in 1535-6. Probably about the same time they visited Thetford Priory. Their patron was Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk from 1524 to 1547, and again from 1553 to Aug. 25, 1554. This company is not again mentioned.

II

The next company under the patronage of a Duke of Norfolk visited Norwich and Exeter in 1556-7. Its patron, Thomas Howard, was Duke of Norfolk from 1554 to 1572. These players are not heard of after 1558-9.

III

When the Mayor of Norwich and 'his brethren' dined with the Duke of Norfolk during the Christmas festivities of 1564-5, and 1565-6, they each time gave a reward of 6s. 8d. to 'the chylderne of my Lorde of

Norff. his Chapell.'[1] As it was customary for the singing-boys of St. Paul's, the Chapel Royal, Westminster School, etc., to act as well as sing, it is not improbable that the Duke of Norfolk's singing-boys also acted, and if so that these performances before the Mayor of Norwich and 'his brethren' were of a dramatic nature. These boys are not again mentioned in our records.[2]

[1] Cf. below, 364-365.

[2] The Duke of Norfolk had also in his patronage a bearward who exhibited his bears at Bristol in 1568-9 (cf. below, 211).

As no Duke of Norfolk's players are elsewhere mentioned till 1535-6, the Thetford entry probably refers to the company which was under the patronage of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, 1524-1540.

LORD OGLE'S COMPANY

Cuthbert Ogle, Lord Ogle, seems to have taken a company of players into his patronage about 1578-9, when they visited Gloucester. From that date till their patron's death, on March 16, 1597, they are frequently mentioned in the provinces. After Cuthbert Ogle's death in 1597 the Barony of Ogle fell into abeyance till 1626. Nevertheless in 1601-2 a Lord Ogle's company appeared at Coventry, and in 1609 at Doncaster. It was probably the Lord Ogle's company of 1578-9–1597, which, not having obtained a new patron, continued to act under the old name. After 1609 this company is not heard of.

1, EARL OF OXFORD'S COMPANY

The first appearance of an Earl of Oxford's company of players was at Dover on August 1, 1556. At this time John de Vere was Earl of Oxford. Until his death on August 3, 1562, this company, which frequently played in the provinces, remained under his patronage.[1] It then passed immediately into the patronage of his successor, Edward de Vere, for during 1562-3 it often appeared in the provinces. After 1563, however, there are no records of an Oxford's company till 1580. In all probability about 1563 or 1564, this Oxford company was disbanded or passed under other patronage. The Earl of Oxford, at that time, was only thirteen years old, was a royal ward, and was in the charge of Sir William Cecil, Master of the Court of Wards, who drew up special orders for his exercises and studies, [1] In 1561-2 the Earl of Oxford's juggler and flute player appeared at Ipswich (cf. below, 287).

and had received him as an inmate of his house.[1] Cecil and Arthur Golding, Oxford's tutor, no doubt considered the continuance of Oxford's patronage to a company of players unnecessary, and the company had to seek another patron or disband.[2]

[1] Dict. Nat. Biog., lviii. 225.

[2] Oxford's second company appeared in 1580. It consisted of boys, and played in London (cf. i. 344).

1, 2, LORD RUSSELL, EARL OF BEDFORD—1, LORD ADMIRAL'S COMPANIES[1]

I

In 1540-1 a company of players calling themselves the Lord Admiral's men, visited Plymouth. At that date John Russell, Baron Russell, and afterwards Earl of Bedford, was Lord Admiral, and the company was undoubtedly under his patronage. Most likely it was this company which appeared at Plymouth in 1547-8 as the Lord Privy Seal's men, for Baron Russell was Lord Privy Seal from 1543 to 1547. After 1547-8 there are no traces of a company under the patronage of John Russell, Baron Russell and Earl of Bedford.

II

When John Russell was created Earl of Bedford on Jan. 19, 1550, his son Francis Russell assumed the title Lord Russell, by which he was known till his father's death on March 14, 1555, when he became Earl of Bedford. In 1552 a company under his patronage visited Shrewsbury. This company appeared occasionally in the provinces till 1565. After March 14, 1555, it was known as the Earl of Bedford's company.

LORD SHEFFIELD'S COMPANY

A Lord Sheffield's company of players first appeared in 1577-8, when they acted at Exeter, Bristol, and Gloucester. The record of their visit to Bristol is an interesting one, for it tells us that they performed a play not again heard of, The Court of Comfort, before Mr. Mayor and the Alderman in the Guild Hall.[1] From 1577-8 to 1585-6, when they finally disappear, this company frequently played in the provinces. There is some likelihood that about 1580, John Alleyn, brother to Edward Alleyn, was a member of this company.[2] Their patron from 1577-8 to 1585-6 was Edmund Sheffield, Baron Sheffield, who held that title from Dec., 1568, to Feb. 5, 1626, when he was created Earl of Mulgrave. He died in Oct. 1646.

[1] The Talbots were interested in players from very early times. In 1408-9 a Lord Furnival's company acted at Shrewsbury (Hist. MSS. Com., xv. Appendix 10, p. 28). At the time John Talbot, who later became Lord Talbot, and Earl of Shrewsbury, seems to have been styled Lord Furnival because of his marriage to Maud, Baroness Furnival, in 1406. He was summoned to Parliament as Lord Furnival in Oct., 1409. Again in 1495 an Earl of Shrewsbury's company visited Shrewsbury (Helps to Hereford History, Devlin, 71). patronage of George Talbot, who was Earl of Shrewsbury from c. 1560 to 1590. Concerning the construction of the company nothing is known. It may have been the company which acted in 1572-3 under the patronage of Francis Talbot, Lord Talbot, the eldest son of the Earl of Shrewsbury, and was, for some reason, transferred from the son's to the father's patronage.[1]

II

Nothing more is heard of an Earl of Shrewsbury's company of players till 1616, when such a company acted at Coventry. They appeared again at Coventry on December 20, 1617, and about the same time at Nottingham, and then finally disappeared. Their patron was Edward Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, from May 6, 1616, to Feb. 8, 1618.

From this time until 1551 these players performed frequently in the provinces. As they are not heard of after that, they probably disbanded or passed under other patronage about the time of the Duke of Somerset's execution on Jan. 22, 1552.

LORD STAFFORD'S COMPANY

In 1574-5 a Lord Stafford's company of players appeared at Barnstaple.[1] Its patron was Edward Stafford, Baron Stafford from 1566 to Oct. 18, 1603. References to this company are very frequent in the provincial records till 1601-2. In 1577, when it visited Southampton, it contained ten players.[2] After the death of its patron on Oct. 18, 1603, it must have immediately passed into the patronage of his successor, Edward Stafford, Baron Stafford, from 1603 to Sept., 1625, for in December, 1603, it visited York as Lord Stafford's company. It continued to play in the provinces till 1617, when it is heard of for the last time.[3]

[1] As early as 1400-1 the Staffords seem to have been interested in music and the drama, for in that year, at Shrewsbury, there were 'entertainments twice for the players ("histriones") of the Prince and the Earl of Stafford, and once for the "menstralles" of the Earls of Worcester and Stafford' (Hist. MSS. Com., xv. App. 10, p. 27). At that time Edmund Stafford, who was killed at the battle of Shrewsbury in July, 1403, was Earl of Stafford. In 1559 the following entry, which may refer to a Lord Stafford's company, occurs in the Shrewsbury Bailiff's Accounts, 'Regard "lusiator" domini Stafford.' At the time Henry Stafford was Baron Stafford.

[2] Cf. below, 397. This Baron Stafford had also bearwards in his patronage. They appeared with his players at Shrewsbury in 1579-80 (cf. below, 391).

[3] Edmund Stafford also patronised a company of trumpeters, who performed at York in 1605 (cf. below, 413).

1, DUKE AND DUCHESS OF SUFFOLK—1, EARL OF SUFFOLK'S COMPANIES

I

A company of players existed under the patronage of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, as early as 1525, when they played at Shrewsbury. From 1525, to the Earl's death in August, 1545, this company frequently acted in the provinces.[1] After the Earl's death they passed under the patronage of his widow, Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk, for in 1547-8 they appeared under her name at Canterbury and Dover. Until 1563 the Duchess of Suffolk's players frequently visited the provincial towns. The players so denominated were undoubtedly, till Oct. 11, 1551, those of Katherine, Dowager Duchess of Suffolk. On that date Henry Grey, Marquis of Dorset, was created Duke of Suffolk, and his wife Frances, daughter of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, and Mary Tudor, Dowager Queen of France, became Duchess of Suffolk. Henry Grey died in 1554. His widow sometime afterwards married Adrian Stokes, a gentleman of her household. She died in Nov. 1559. Meanwhile, probably about 1553, Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk, married Richard Bertie, M.P. She died on Sept. 19, 1580. At first sight, then, it seems doubtful whether Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk, or Frances, Duchess of Suffolk, was the patroness of the Duchess of Suffolk's company which acted twice at Dover in 1552-3. But as this company is called, when first mentioned in 1552-3, 'the old doches of Suffolkes players,'[1] and Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk, had in her patronage a company of players before 1551, when Frances became Duchess of Suffolk, and after 1559, when Frances died, while neither Frances nor her husband, the Duke of Suffolk, seems to have patronised a company after 1551,[2] there can be little doubt that the 1552-3 company was that of Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk.

After the marriage of Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk, to Richard Bertie, M.P., about 1553, her company of players continued to appear till 1563 as the Duchess of Suffolk's men. In 1560-61, at Leicester, and in 1562, at Beverley, a Duke or Lord of Suffolk's company is mentioned. As there was no Duke, Earl, or Lord of Suffolk from 1554 to 1603, these entries must contain mistakes on the part of the Chamberlains of Leicester and Beverley. The company referred to was no doubt that of Katherine, Dowager-Duchess of Suffolk. After 1563 nothing more is heard of this company.

II

In 1616-17 an Earl of Suffolk's company of players appeared at Marlborough. It was under the patron-

[1] Cf. below, 73. The second entry in the same accounts for the same year has a line drawn through the 'old.' Whether this is due to politeness on the Chamberlain's part, or some other reason, can only be conjectured. That the company was the same as the one before called 'the old doches of Suffolke's players,' there can be little doubt, for the Chamberlain who had paid both times evidently so thought.

age of Thomas Howard, who was created Earl of Suffolk on July 21, 1603, and held the title till his death on May 28, 1626. This company is heard of again in 1617-18 at Exeter. After that it disappears from our records.

1, 2, [3], LORD WILLOUGHBY'S COMPANIES

I

A Lord Willoughby's company of players visited Norwich and Leicester in 1560-1 (i.e. Sept. 29, '60-Sept. 28, '61), and Shrewsbury in 1561. Its patron was Sir William Willoughby, Baron Willoughby of Parham, 1547 to 1574.[1] This company is not heard of after 1561.

II

From 1595 to 1598-9 a second Lord Willoughby's company acted in the provinces. Their patron was Charles Willoughby, Baron Willoughby of Parham, 1574 to 1603. On Dec. 4, 1597, they played with Lord Beauchamp's men at Norwich.[2] Concerning the make-up of the company nothing is known.

III

In 1612-13 the Chamberlain of Coventry made the following entry in his account book, 'Given to the wayts of Worster and the Lord Willoughby his men as appeareth by an other bill—iii s.'[3] Whether or not these Lord Willoughby's 'men' were players it is impossible to decide. The payment to them, a part of 3s., was a very niggardly reward for the Coventry authorities to offer a company of players, the usual payment being from 6s. 8d. to £4. Also the fact that no Lord Willoughby's players had appeared since 1598-9, or appeared after 1612-13, is against the supposition that these 'men' were actors. However, if they were, their patron was William Willoughby, Baron Willoughby of Parham, 1603 to 1617.

[1] If Sir Fulke Greville was, as some authorities claim, Lord Willoughby de Broke in 1560, he was generally known as Lord Brooke, and so his players, if he had any, would be called Lord Brooke's players (cf. Complete Peerage; Nicolas's Historic Peerage of England, Courthope; Dict. Nat. Biog., etc.). Lord Willoughby had also a company of minstrels in his patronage. They visited Ipswich in 1563 (cf. below, 288).

Between 1509 and 1540, . .	Thetford Priory.	(Sir Thomas Challoner's players).

XVII

LORD CHARTLEY'S COMPANY

The only Lord Chartley mentioned by 'G. E. C.' is Robert Devereux, who, from 1576 to 1601, was Viscount Hereford, Lord Ferrers of Chartley Castle, and Earl of Essex. If this company were under his patronage, it is peculiar that it was not known as the Earl of Essex's company.

XXXI

LORD GREY DE POWIS'S COMPANY

Edward Grey was Lord Grey de Powis from 1504 to July 2, 1551. He was related by marriage to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, whose company was well known in the provinces from 1528 to 1562-3.[1]

1547-8. Sept. 29, '47–Aug. 20, '48, ...	Dover.	(Lord Grey's players).

[1] Cf. Duke and Duchess of Suffolk's players, above, 71-74.

XXXII

LORD GORING'S COMPANY

In 1637 Lord Goring's and the Earl of Leicester's players performed together at Leicester.[1] The Lord Goring of this time was George Goring, Baron Goring of Hurstpierpont, a famous loyalist who, in 1644, was created Earl of Norwich. Probably his company broke up between 1637 and Jan. 9, 1640, for on the latter date George Corden, servant to the Earl of Leicester, William Johnson, servant to the Lord Clifford, George Sanderson, servant to the Lord Goring, and thirteen assistants, players, appeared at Coventry with a King's Patent. The town authorities erected a scaffold for them and gave them a liberal reward.[2] This is the last mention of any players under Lord Goring's patronage.

1637, ...	Leicester. (Lord Goring's players).
1639-40. Jan. 9, '40, . . .	Coventry. ('Georg Sanderson servant to the Lord Goring,' with George Corden, a Leicester's man and William Johnson, a Clifford's man, and 13 other players).

XXXIII

SIR EDWARD GUILDEFORD, LORD WARDEN OF THE CINQUE PORTS' COMPANY

Sir Edward Guildeford was Constable of Dover Castle and Warden of the Cinque Ports from 1521-2 to 1532-3.[3]

1529-30, ...	Southampton. ('my lord Wardens players of the V ports').

XXXVI

LORD HASTINGS OF LOUGHBOROUGH'S COMPANY

Sir Edward Hastings was Lord Hastings of Loughborough from Jan. 19, 1558, to March 5, 1572. He was a zealous Roman Catholic and was imprisoned in the Tower in 1561 for hearing Mass. After his release he retired to a hospital he had founded at Stoke Pogis, Bucks, where he died on March 5, 1572. The fact that he had a company of players in his patronage shows clearly that about 1565-6, even the stricter English Roman Catholics were not averse to the drama.

1565-6, ...	Leicester.	(Lord Hastings of Loughborough's players).

MR. HENING'S COMPANY

1542-3. Jan. 17, '43, . .	Bristol.	(Mr. Hening's players).

XXXVIII

LORD HERBERT'S COMPANY

Edward Somerset, son of the Earl of Worcester, was styled Lord Herbert from c. 1550 to Feb. 21, 1589, when he succeeded to the earldom. One of his players seems to have been playing with the Earl of Worcester's company at Leicester in 1583, when that company quarrelled with the Mayor.[1]

1574-5, ...	Leicester.	('Lorde Harbards players').

XXXIX

MR. ALEXANDER HOUGHTON'S COMPANY

Mr. Alexander Houghton of Lea, in his will, dated Aug. 2, 1581, and proved at Chester on Sept. 12, 1581, bequeathed to his brother, Thomas Houghton of Brynscoles, 'all manner of playe clothes yf he be mynded to keppe and mantyene players.'[2] The implication certainly is that, prior to 1581, Mr. Alexander Houghton maintained a company of players. There are no further records of this company.

LV

THE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND—2, LORD ADMIRAL'S COMPANY[1]

On Feb. 18, 1547, John Dudley, Viscount Lisle, was created Earl of Warwick. During 1549-50 he was Great Admiral of England, and on Oct. 11, 1551, he was created Duke of Northumberland, which title he held till his execution on Aug. 22, 1553. The company of players under his patronage, first appeared as the Lord Admiral's men, and after 1551 as the Duke of Northumberland's players.

Warwick, 1618, Aug. 2–1619, March 24. After 1587-[9] there are no records of a company under the patronage of a Lord Rich.

LXI

THE DUKE OF RICHMOND'S COMPANY

On June 18, 1525, Henry Fitzroy, an illegitimate son of Henry VIII., being then about six years old, was created Earl of Nottingham, and Duke of Richmond and Somerset. He died on July 22, 1536, and consequently his company of players, if he still had one, must have then either disbanded or sought another patron.

LXII

LORD ROCHFORD'S COMPANY

According to 'G. E. C.,' there was no Lord Rochford from 1539, when Sir Thomas Boleyn, Viscount Rochford, Earl of Wiltshire, and Earl of Ormond died, till July 6, 1621, when Henry Carey, Baron Hunsdon, was created Viscount Rochford. This company, therefore, must have been either under the patronage of some person, probably one of the Boleyns, who had no right to the title, or else was the company of Sir Thomas Boleyn continuing to use his title after his death.

THE LORD STEWARD'S COMPANY

It is doubtful who was patron of this company. According to Ockerby, Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, was Lord Steward from 1570 to 1588.[2] But G. E. C. states that William Paulet, Marquis of Winchester, was acting as Lord Steward on Aug. 1, 1587, at the time of the funeral of Mary, Queen of Scots. Moreover, after the death of Leicester, William Paulet, Lord St. John of Basing, eldest son of the Marquis of Winchester, succeeded him as Lord Steward.[3] Apparently, then, as Leicester's

PLAYERS' COMPANIES

PLAYERS' COMPANIES

I

NICHOLAS LONG'S COMPANY

In February, 1620, Nicholas Long left the 4, Queen's Revels company to manage a new company which received its licence on that date. The only recorded appearance of these players is at Norwich on May 20, 1620, when they were allowed to play for a few days.[1] The name of the company is not given.

II

ELLIS GUEST—2, QUEEN HENRIETTA'S COMPANY

I

On March 16, 1625, Sir Henry Herbert granted a licence to a company of players under the leadership of Ellis Guest, Thomas Swinnerton, and Arthur Grimes.[2] As there are no references after c. 1620 to a company under Swinnerton's individual management till 1628, his late Queen Anne's company was probably, in part at least, amalgamated with the new [1] Cf. below, 345. This company of Long's could not have been the 4, Queen's Revels, because the latter company continued to appear after 1620 under the authority of their licence of Oct. 31, 1617 (cf. 4, Queen's Revels company, i. 362).

[2] Cf. below, 352-353, 316.

company of 1625. On May 28, these men appeared at Norwich, presented their licence, and craved leave to play. The Mayor's Court, however, showed them a copy of a proclamation against players dated Nov. 22, 1622, which had been brought to Norwich on Jan. 29, 1625, by Gilbert Reason, one of the Prince's men, and refused to allow them to play. But 'in regard of the honorable report wch this City beareth to the right ho^ble^ ye Lo: Chamberlyn and Sr Henry Hobart' a reward of 20s. was given the players. Possibly because the company did not receive this reward with becoming gratitude, the Court later decided to write to the Lord Chamberlain about players, with what result is not known.[1] On March 6, 1626, these men visited Leicester and were given a reward of £1. Ellis Guest, Thomas Swinnerton and Arthur Grimes are mentioned as members of the company.[2]

Between March 6, 1626, and June 7, 1628, Swinnerton left these players and formed a company, for when a new licence was granted to Guest's company, on June 7, 1628, Swinnerton is not mentioned in it, though an unusually full list of the players is given.[3] Moreover, on July 2, 1628, Guest's men visited Norwich and were given a reward of £1, and on July 19, Swinnerton and his company appeared in Norwich, and were likewise granted a reward of £1.[4]

II

On June 7, 1628, Ellis Guest's company was granted a new licence by Sir Henry Herbert. In

[1] Cf. below, 352-353. [2] Ibid., 316. [3] Ibid., 103. [4] Ibid., 352-353, 371

this licence the following members of the company are named :—

'Elis Guest.
Antony Burton.
Anthony Grymes.
Wm Eyton.
Edward Bayly.
Josias White.
Wm Harvye.
Nicolas Lowe.
Tho. Dougton.
Richard Hanly.
Richard Bromefild.
Richard Willis.
Antony Gibes.' [1]

On July 2, 1628, this company came to Norwich, but were not allowed to play, though given a reward of £1.

The next year, on June 27, Guest again visited Norwich. He presented a licence dated June 8, 1629, and stated that he was a member of the Lady Elizabeth's company and that the rest of the company were at Thetford. As no such licence as the above is traceable to the Lady Elizabeth's men, and Guest is nowhere else connected with that company, there can be little doubt, either that the clerk made a mistake in the entry or that Guest presented a false licence. The Norwich authorities gave him a gratuity of 40s., which he 'thankfully accepted.' [2] During 1629 Guest's company also visited Leicester, and on the 12th [Nov., 1630] Reading.

III

On July 15, 1631, a new licence, good for six months, was granted to 'Ellys Guest, Richard Errington and their company' by the Master of the Revels.[1] As this is the first mention of Ellis Guest and Richard Errington together, it seems not improbable that some reorganisation of the company took place before the new licence was granted. It may be that at this time they were taken under the patronage of Queen Henrietta, as her travelling company, for when they next appeared at Norwich, on June 22, 1633, they were called 'the Queen's players.'[2]

Not till June 25, 1634, is this company again heard of. On that date they were granted a new licence, which was duly presented when they next visited Norwich on Sept. 13, 1634.[3] In Nov., 1634, Thomas Dutton left the Queen's men to join William Daniel's new King's Revels company.[4] During 1635 'a certeyne company of roguish players' played A New Way to pay Old Debts, at Skipton Castle, the seat of the Cliffords, and were rewarded with £1. On the same visit they seem to have played The Knight of the Burning Pestle, in which they were assisted by one 'Adam Gerdler, whom my Lord sent for from York to act a part.'[5] As both these plays are mentioned as acted by the Queen's company in London, there can be little doubt that the players performing them before Lord Clifford were the

Queen's travelling company.[1] In all probability this company broke up during 1635, for it is not mentioned after that year, and in April, 1636, Richard Errington appeared as a member of William Daniel's King's Revels players.[2]

THOMAS SWINNERTON'S COMPANY

Between March 6, 1626, and June 7, 1628, Thomas Swinnerton formed a company of players.[3] This company visited Norwich on July 19, 1628,[1] and during the same year appeared at Leicester.[2] After 1628 nothing is heard of this company, which does not seem to have been under the patronage of any of the royal family or nobility.

IV

KNIGHT'S COMPANY

A company under the management of a player named Knight, visited Leicester in 1628, and was given a reward of 10s. Later in the year this company again appeared at Leicester, for the town Chamberlain noted that 'Mr. Kite [i.e. Knight] a playe and his Companie' were rewarded with 10s. by the authorities.[3] Nothing further is heard of Knight or his company.[4]

RICHARD BRADSHAW'S COMPANY

After 1610, by which date Richard Bradshaw had probably left the company of Lord Edward Dudley,[5] nothing further is heard of him till 1630, when he appeared at Reading as the leader of a company of players.[6] It was, no doubt, this company which got into trouble at Banbury in May, 1633.[7] On that

[1] Cf. below, 371. [2] Ibid., 317. [3] Ibid.

[4] Mr. Kelly conjectures that this Knight was the person from whom Sir Henry Herbert received £2, 'for allowing of Ben Johnson's play called "Humours reconcil'd, or the Magnetick Lady," to bee acted, this 12th of Octob. 1632' (Notices of Leicester, 292-293). There is, however, no evidence for this conjecture.

[5] Cf. above, 317. [6] Cf. below, 386.

[7] Ibid., 163 f. Collier has the following note on the notorious Puritans of Banbury: 'Ben Jonson calls Zeal-o'-the-land Busy in his Bartholomew occasion the town authorities becoming suspicious of the validity of the company's licence, arrested and imprisoned them, and sent a letter to the Privy Council stating what they had done, and enclosing their examination of the players. In this letter they said that the players had 'changed their names,' apparently meaning that the actors had given false names when they were examined. The names thus given were :—

Bartholomew Jones.
Richard Whiting, or Richard Johnson alias Bea . . .
Edward Damport.
Drewe Turner.
Robert Houghton.
Richard Collewell.

From the examination of these men we gather :— (1) That Richard Bradshaw was their 'master,' and that he had left them a few days before (i.e. 'on Saturday last') while they were at Kineton, co. Warwick, for London, whither he had gone to 'renew the commission and to bring more company,' intending to join them again 'on Monday next at Thame, co. Oxford,' or as another player said, 'at Marlow in Bucks.' (2) That one, Edward Whiting,

Fair, "a Banbury Man," and in his Gipsies Metamorphosed, he laughs at "the loud pure wives of Banbury." Davenant's Wits was written in 1633, and the following ridicule of the Puritans of Banbury may have arisen out of the proceeding about to be detailed [i.e. the proceedings of May 1633] :—

'"She is more devout
Than a Weaver of Banbury, that hopes
To entice heaven by singing to make him lord
Of twenty looms."'

(Collier, i. 473 n.)

who is described as 'a surgeon,' either had been or was in some way connected with the company.[1] (3) That the company had been acting in the country about two years, though undergoing many changes during that time. Jones, Damport, and Collewell said they had been with the company for two years, Turner for one year, Whiting or Johnson for six months, and Houghton since 'Thursday before Easter last.'

Now, though all the statements of these men when on trial are subject to suspicion, there seems to be no good reason why Richard Bradshaw and Edward Whiting should be false names. These persons were far out of the reach of the authorities of Banbury. Neither, considering that the players in Banbury had shifted the responsibility for obtaining the licence, and consequently of answering for its validity, on to the shoulders of Richard Bradshaw, does there seem to be any reason for their lying about the length of time they had been connected with the company, or the places they had visited. Besides, there does not seem to have been much cause for their lying, even about where and when they obtained their licence, the main cause of their imprisonment, for when they were brought before the Privy Council in June, 1633, they were discharged by that body 'upon bond given to be forthcoming whensoever they should be called for.'[2]

We may then, I think, assume that Bradshaw, whether in partnership with Edward Whiting or

[1] The statements about Whiting are very contradictory. It is stated by Jones and Turner that Bradshaw and Whiting were partners.

[2] Cf. below, 167.

not, formed a company about 1630. If we take the 'two years' mentioned by the players in their examination to be approximate, this company may well be the one which appeared in Reading in 1630.[1] It is improbable that this company was under the patronage of any nobleman, for if they had been, they would certainly have used the influence of his name at their trial in 1633. After 1633 I have found no mention of Bradshaw, or of any company connected with him.

[1] Edward Whiting and Bradshaw may have been also interested in a travelling puppet-play, for Houghton in his examination said: 'Edward Whiting let the commission in question to William Cooke and Fluellen Morgan, and they two went with it with a puppet-play until they had spent all, then they pawned the commission for four shillings. Mr. Bradshaw hearing of it, redeemed, and afterwards bought it' (cf. below, 165).

Mr. Fleay identifies this Bradshaw's company of 1633 with the company of the King's Revels, which he dates c. 1629 to 1636 (Stage, 330-331). His evidence for this identification is that in Nath. Richard's Messalina, published in 1640, a list of the King's Revels actors is given, and among them appears Richard Johnson, whom Mr. Fleay assumes to be the Richard Johnson of the Banbury episode. This evidence is of little value, for—(1) It assumes that Richard Johnson is a true name, and the only true name given at the Banbury trial. Now the report to the Privy Council, after referring to the witness as 'Richard Whiting,' states: 'His name is Richard Johnson, alias Bea. . . .' This 'alias Bea . . .' Mr. Fleay ignores, though it certainly throws doubt on the genuineness of the name 'Richard Johnson.' It would be just as reasonable to develop 'Bea . . .' into Beaston or Beeston and identify the company with Queen Henrietta's, to which Christopher Beeston at the time belonged. (2) This assumption that Richard Johnson was the only true name given at the Banbury trial, forces Mr. Fleay to conclude that, as the Privy Council found nothing seriously wrong with their licence, 'the Revels company appear to have travelled with a true passport but under false names.' Why a company of such standing and patronage as the King's Revels, having a true licence, should travel under false names, when the use of their true names and title would have meant greater 'rewards' from the towns, larger audiences, and more respectful treatment by the civic authorities, is hard to understand. (3) It ignores the connection of Richard Bradshaw with the company which appeared at Banbury in 1633. Mr. Fleay knows nothing of Bradshaw as one of the leading actor-managers of provincial companies, and so has endeavoured to connect Bradshaw's company with one of the London companies he is acquainted with, the King's Revels. This is a fair example of the danger of attempting to write the history of the London companies, while ignoring the provincial companies. (4) Even supposing that Richard Johnson is a true name, and that he was the same Richard Johnson who appeared in Banbury in May, 1633, and in the King's Revels company, it is clear that he might have joined the King's Revels between May, 1633, and 1637, for Messalina was not printed till 1640, and Mr. Fleay himself in his last utterance on the subject supposes it to have been acted after the plague of 1637 (Drama, ii. 169). (5) The statement of Jones and Damport, that for two years they had 'gone with this company up and down the country playing stage-plays,' if there is any truth in it, certainly indicates that this was a provincial company, and not one of the leading London companies which spent most of its time in a London theatre.

It seems certain then that Richard Bradshaw's company was not identical with the King's Revels company of c. 1633, but was a comparatively unimportant provincial company which did not act in London, and that if Richard Johnson is a true name and the same person as the Richard Johnson of the King's Revels company, he joined that company between May, 1633, and 1637.

Germany, with the intention of passing through the countries of Zealand, Holland, and Friesland, and while going on their said journey, of practising their profession by performing of music, feats of agility, and games of comedies, tragedies, and histories for maintaining themselves and providing for their expenses on their said journey. These presents are therefore to request you to shew and afford them every favour in your countries and jurisdictions, and to grant them in my favour your full passport under the seal of the states, to the end that the Burgomasters of the towns being under your jurisdiction, do not hinder them in passing from practising their said profession everywhere. In your doing which I shall remain obliged to all, and you will find me very ready to return your courtesy in greater instances. Given from my chamber at the Court of England the tenth day of February, 1591.—Your very devoted to doing you pleasure and service, C. HOWARD.'[1]

III. MR. FLEAY'S THEORIES ABOUT THE 2, EARL OF PEMBROKE'S COMPANY

Mr. Fleay's account of the Earl of Pembroke's company from 1597 to 1602, is so different from that given above (cf. i. 59 f.) that a detailed statement and discussion of it is necessary. On page 137 of Mr. Fleay's History of the London Stage, he speaks of Pembroke's men thus: 'In 1597, October 11, they began to play with the Admiral's men at the Rose. This conjunction lasted till 1598, March 4 (Diary, p. 103). A remodelling of the companies then followed, and a comparison of the lists of the Admiral's men before and after shows that Gabriel Spenser, Robert Shaw, Humfrey Jeffes, and Antony Jeffes then left Pembroke's and joined the Admiral's company. They had previously to coming to the Rose, travelled from July to September, 1597, and after this reorganisation they again travelled from 1598 to 1600 (Halliwell-Phillipps, Life of Shakespeare).' In contradiction of these statements, Mr. Fleay, in a discussion of the evidence in the Diary on which the above account of the company is based, apparently concludes that the Admiral's men acted at the Rose from Oct. 11 to Oct. 30, 1597, and the Admiral's and Pembroke's companies together from Nov. 1, to Nov. 5, and that the reorganisation of these companies occurred on either Nov. 5, 1597, or in Dec., 1597 (Stage, 101). It is undoubtedly the second of these theories that Mr. Fleay prefers (the first is sufficiently refuted above, i. 67 f.), for in his list of actors he dates the careers of the following men thus :—

[1] Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, 198.

'Spenser, Gabriel . . [Pem. 1594-7]; Adm. 1597-8.'
'Shaw, Robert . . . [Pem. 1594-7]; Adm. 1597-8.'
'Jeffes, Humphrey . . [Pem. 1594-7]; Adm. 1597-1603; etc.'
'Jeffes, Antony . . . [Pem. 1594-7]; Adm. 1597-1603; etc.'

(Stage, 373, 374). Consequently only the second theory need be discussed in detail.

The evidence which Mr. Fleay adduces to show that the Admiral's men acted at the Rose from Oct. 11 to Oct. 30, and the Admiral's and Pembroke's companies together from Nov. 1 to Nov. 5, 1597, is that, according to Collier's transcript from the Diary, Henslowe paid the Master of the Revels forty shillings on Nov. 2, for the right to play for three weeks, i.e. from Oct. 11 to Oct. 30 (Collier, Diary, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1845, p. 91). Mr. Fleay says, 'This' (i.e. the above payment) 'was clearly to commence a new account on Monday, 31st October, and any one familiar with Henslowe's blundering will see that the last six plays on p. 91 were consecutive performances, 31st October to 5th November, and that during this week only did Pembroke's men perform with the Admiral's. Henslowe's October 31 should be November 1' (Stage, 101). This evidence is quite valueless, because Collier's transcript of the Diary is inaccurate. According to Mr. Greg the entry in the Diary reads, 'the M^r payde the 26 of Novemb3 1597 for iiij weckes the some of xxxx^s.' (Diary, ed. Greg, 54.) This part of Mr. Fleay's theory, then, must be abandoned for lack of evidence.

The second part of Mr. Fleay's theory is that on Nov. 5, or in Dec., 1597, a reorganisation of the Earl of Pembroke's and the Lord Admiral's companies took place, and Gabriel Spenser, Robert Shaw, Humphrey Jeffes, and Antony Jeffes then passed from Pembroke's to the Admiral's company. Mr. Fleay's evidence for this part of his theory is that, though these men did not appear in the list of the Admiral's men for December, 1594, they are to be found in that company on October 11, 1597 (Stage, 137). Now, so far as Spenser and the two Jeffes are concerned, they may have been members of the Admiral's company in 1594, for the list of that year is an incomplete one containing only eight names, probably not more than half the company.

This is all the more likely because the Jeffes never seem to have attained a very important position in the company, judging from the fact that they are always far down in the lists of these players, and Antony is often omitted. Spenser, who is second in the 1597 list, may have risen into prominence after 1594 (cf. i. 125). Moreover, Spenser, the two Jeffes, and Shaw appear in the list of the Admiral's men for Oct. 11, 1597, which is sufficient to show that they were members of that company before Nov. 5, or Dec., 1597. Concerning Shaw there is further evidence to show that he must have joined the Admiral's company before Nov. 5, or Dec., 1597. Henslowe began to gather together the Lord Admiral's company for the winter season of 1597-8 in July, 1597 (Diary, ed. Greg, 201 f.). On August 6, 1597, we find Richard Jones entering into the following agreement with Henslowe: 'M^r^andom that the 6 of aguste 1597 J bownd Richard Jones by & a sumsett of ij^d^ to contenew & playe wth the companye of my lord admeralles players frome mi[x]helmase next after the daye a bowe w^r^itten vntell the eand & tearme of iij yeares emediatly folowinge & to playe in my howsse only known by the name of the Rosse & in no other howsse a bowt london publicke & yf Restraynte be granted then to go for the tyme into the contry & after to retorne agayne to london yf he breacke this a sumsett then to forfett vnto me for the same a hundreth markes of lafull money of Ingeland wittnes to this E Alleyn & John Midelton.

More over Richard Jones at that tyme hath tacken one other ij^d^ of me vpon & asumset to forfet vnto me one hundrethe [m] markes yf one Robert Shaee do not playe wth my lordes admeralles men as he hath covenanted be fore in euery thinge & time to the oter moste wittnes /E Alleyn/ John Midellton/.' (Diary, ed. Greg, 202.) Jones was as good as his word, for on Oct. 6, 1597, 'E Alleyn, w^m^ borne, dicke Jonnes, Roberte shawe, John synger,' evidently all Admiral's men, witnessed an agreement for Henslowe and 'thomas dowton' (Diary, ed. Greg, 203). Evidently then, Shaw did not join the Admiral's men from Pembroke's company on Nov. 5, or in Dec., 1597, but about Michaelmas in that year. Except for the friendly relations which existed between Pembroke's and the Admiral's men there is nothing to show that Shaw came to the latter company from Pembroke's men. It seems, then, that the second part of Mr. Fleay's theory about the relations of Pembroke's and the Admiral's companies in 1597 is as unfounded as the first.

Mr. Fleay thinks that in 1599, when the Strange-Chamberlain company moved into the Globe, Kempe, Duke, Beeston, and Pallant left that company and joined Pembroke's men (Stage, 138-139). Mr. Fleay's evidence for this theory is—(a) Kempe, Duke, and Beeston appear in the list of the Strange-Chamberlain company given in the folio edition of Jonson's Every Man in his Humour, in 1598, but are not found in the list of that company prefixed to the folio, Every Man out of his Humour, played in 1599, after the opening of the Globe. Pallant, though not mentioned in either of these lists, was probably a member of the Strange-Chamberlain company in 1598, and seems to have left that company with Kempe, Duke, and Beeston (cf. i. 103). (b) On the 21st of Sept., 1600, Henslowe lent Duke forty shillings. As Henslowe had at this time no connection with the Strange-Chamberlain company and may have been connected with Pembroke's, the implication is that Duke was a member of the latter company. But the evidence under (a) is of no value, for the list of the Strange-Chamberlain company for 1599 is a partial one, containing only six names out of a company which probably numbered at least sixteen. Even Shakespeare, at this time, undoubtedly one of the principal actors in the company, is not mentioned. Besides, Kempe, when not on the Continent during 1599-1601, was a member of the Strange-Chamberlain company (cf. J. O. Halliwell, Coventry Plays, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, p. 410—'1601, September 2, Kemp, mimus quidam, qui peregrinationem quandam in Germaniam et Italiam instituerat, post multos errores et infortunia sua reversus: multa refert de Anthonio Sherley equite aurato, quem Romae (legatum Persicum agentem) convenerat.' From MS. Sloan, 392, fol. 401). In the stage directions to Quarto 2, Romeo and Juliet, IV. 5, pub. 1599, 'Enter Will Kemp' is substituted for 'Enter Peter'; in Much Ado about Nothing, Quarto of 1600, IV. 2, the names of Kemp and Cowley stand before speeches of Dogberry and Verges; in the Return from Parnassus, Part 2, IV. 3, Kempe and Burbage are introduced as instructing University students in the art of acting, and Kemp, while criticising the University playwrights, says,

'our fellow Shakespeare puts them all down, aye, and Ben Jonson too' (Ward, History, ii. 639-640). As this play was probably written late in 1601 (Ward, History, ii. 639) Kemp's speech would apparently indicate that shortly before he was a member of the Strange-Chamberlain company to which Shakespeare and Burbage belonged. The evidence under (b) is valueless, for it is based on an inaccurate entry in Collier's edition of the Diary (Collier, Diary, 183). The entry is thus given by Mr. Greg :—

'The 1 and twentie daie of scepttember
dvke a thousand six houndard [too] J borrowd player of m^r^ hinchlaw in Redie monie the som of fortie shillings to be paid the twentie daie of october next folleinge the date her of in witnes
her of J set to my hand

JOHN DUKE.'

(Diary, ed. Greg, 132. [too] in italics is Mr. Greg's way of indicating that in the MS. Diary this word is written on the line after 'houndard,' and the 'J' written over it. Apparently Duke, when first writing this agreement, omitted the 'J.' As the too is not crossed out or erased, there is no indication that the date should be 1600). Mr. Collier gives the date as 1600, not 1602. As Duke was a member of the Earl of Worcester's company in Sept., 1602, and was acting at the Rose under Henslowe's management, it was perfectly natural for him to borrow money of Henslowe. This examination of Mr. Fleay's evidence for stating that Kempe, Duke, Beeston, and Pallant left the Strange-Chamberlain company about 1599 to join the Earl of Pembroke's men, has, I think, shown that there is no basis for such a theory.

In 1602, according to Mr. Fleay, the Earl of Pembroke's company appears at the Rose as the Earl of Worcester's company. His evidence for this opinion is, that after 1600 nothing is heard of a Pembroke's company; that the Earl of Pembroke died on March 5, 1601, and consequently the company had to seek a new patron; that he thinks there was no Earl of Worcester's company from 1589 to 1602 (Stage, 138, 87). This evidence is useless, because there was an Earl of Worcester's company from 1589 to 1602, and it was undoubtedly this company, reorganised, which appeared at the Rose in 1602 (cf. i. 58).

Mr. Fleay, in his Stage, 138, and Drama, ii. 69, 72, argues that Antony Monday was the 'poet' of Pembroke's company c. 1599, and that it was this company which was satirised in Histriomastix as Sir Oliver Owlet's men (Histriomastix, Sc. 4). But Mr. Roscoe Addison Small, in his dissertation, The Stage-Quarrel between Ben Jonson and the so-called Poetasters (Breslau, 1899, 88) has shown more convincingly that Sir Oliver Owlet's men were no particular company, but players in general. If this be so, no connection can be traced between Monday and Pembroke's men in 1599.

It seems then, that Mr. Fleay's account of Pembroke's men, from 1597 to 1602, is inaccurate and based on insufficient evidence.

Mr. Fleay thus interprets the facts of these documents,—'Lord Strange's players were, at the beginning of a Long Vacation (10th June, exactly the date of their stopping at the Rose in 1592), restrained from playing there, and ordered to play for three days (i.e. in each week ;) at Newington Butts for fear of infection. During the Long Vacation they petitioned the Privy Council to have the restraint removed to avoid their separation, and for the relief of the watermen. The watermen petitioned the Admiral for the reopening of Henslowe's house "during such time as others have," as it hath been accustomed. Accordingly . . . in December, the reopening was granted. . . . An important point is the mention that at Newington Butts "of long time plays have not been used there on working days."' [2]

To these statements I object, (1) In the documents referring to this matter it is not said that Lord Strange's men were restrained from playing at the Rose 'at the beginning of a Long Vacation.' The words to which Mr. Fleay must refer as the authority for his statement are in document I. ; they are,—'our [i.e. Strange's company] dismission thence [i.e. the Rose] nowe in this longe vacation, is to these poore men a greate hindraunce,' etc. This is a much less specific statement than Mr. Fleay's. (2) Lord Strange's men ceased playing at the Rose on June 22, 1592, not on June 10.[3] (3) The restriction of the theatres owing to the ravages of the plague would almost certainly close the Middlesex theatres as well as the Rose on the Bankside. Mr. Fleay, accordingly asserts, 'No bill of mortality is extant for this year, but the theatres were closed on account of the plague from July to December, and Michaelmas term was kept at Hertford (Stow, 265).'[1] Yet in document II., we find this statement, 'It maye therefore please your good L., . . . to give leave unto the said Phillipp Henslo to have playinge in his saide howse duringe suche tyme as others have, accordinge as it hathe byne accustomed.' This statement would have no point, if it did not refer to other playhouses being open, while the Rose was closed, and if, as appears almost certain, all the theatres were closed about the same time as the Rose, must refer to the autumn or early winter, when, the plague having abated, certain of the theatres had reopened, the Rose still remaining closed. (4) Mr. Fleay ignores the fact that the main plea of Strange's men for the reopening of the Rose, was that their travelling expenses were so great as to force their company to break up, if they had to remain without a good London theatre. Their own statement then, as well as the provincial records we have of them, show that after June 22, 1592, when the Rose was shut up, they travelled.

[1] Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, 36. [2] Fleay, Stage, 85-86.

[3] Diary, ed. Greg, 15. Mr. Fleay (Stage, 83) gives June 22 as the date when Lord Strange's men ceased playing at the Rose in 1592. On page 85 (Stage) he says, 'no account of the proceedings of Lord Strange's men between 10th June and December 1592 is contained in Henslowe's Diary.' In his summary of the Diary (Stage, 95) he again gives June 22 as the date.

On pages 85-86, vol. i., I have given what seems to me a more reasonable interpretation of these documents.

Edward Alleyn's connection with the stage after 1596.

Whether or not Edward Alleyn ever acted after 1597, when he 'left playing' with the Admiral's men at the Rose (cf. i. 121-122) has been much discussed. Collier supposed that Alleyn returned to the stage as an Admiral's man when that company began acting at the Fortune in 1600 and that he had finally left the stage by 1612, if not as early as 1606. (Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, 47, 95, 97, 98; English Dramatic Poetry, etc. iii. 123). Mr. G. F. Warner is certain that when the Admiral's men opened at the Fortune in 1600, Edward Alleyn was their head player. As to when Alleyn finally 'left playing,' Mr. Warner says, 'Whether Alleyn still continued to act after he became bear-master [i.e. Nov. 24, 1604] is uncertain. On the accession of James I. the Lord Admiral's company was taken over by Prince Henry and Alleyn is formally styled "servant to the Prince" as late as 1612. His name, however, is not in the list of the Prince's players in 1607, nor in another list probably of a still earlier date; and from the way in which Thomas Heywood speaks of him in 1612 (Apology for Actors, ed. 1841, p. 43) his retirement could hardly then have been recent:—"Among so many [actors] dead let me not forget one yet alive, in his time the most worthy, famous Maister Edward Allen." His last recorded appearance was on 15th March, 1603-4, when as Genius, he delivered "with excellent action and a well-tun'de, audible voyce," an address to James I. at his reception in the city (T. Dekker, Magnificent Entertainment, 1604).' (Dict. Nat. Biog.)

[1] Diary, ed. Greg, 205.

Mr. William Rendle rather ambiguously says, 'He [i.e. Alleyn] is said to have "leafte playinge" in 1597, probably a temporary retirement, as he is a member of his company in 1601, and is one of the Prince's servants in 1604. The same is said of him long after, in 1612. As he was largely engaged in profitable business and in the management of sports, it is far more probable, with his great name as an actor, and his good nature, that he may have taken parts occasionally. The exact time he ceased to act cannot be made clear.' (Reprint from The Genealogist, Dec., 1885, 8-9). Whether Mr. Rendle means that Alleyn occasionally took parts after 1597, 1601, 1604 or 1612, is doubtful.

Mr. Fleay considers that Alleyn's retirement from the stage in 1597 was final. Alleyn's appearance in I. Tamar Cam, in 1602, he explains thus: 'I venture to conjecture that Edward, whose affection for all namesakes, relatives or no, was so prominent, performed in this revival for the widow's' (i.e. the widow of Richard Alleyn) 'benefit. We have no other mention of him on the boards after 1597' (Stage, 144). Any other appearance of Edward Alleyn's name in connection with the Admiral's company, after 1597, Mr. Fleay explains by supposing that Alleyn and Henslowe were co-managers of the company (Stage, 140).

As opinion thus differs as to when Edward Alleyn ceased acting, it seems well to set forth the evidence in the matter at length. The first part of the evidence consists of all significant references to Edward Alleyn after Oct. 11, 1597, in Henslowe's Diary. These references I shall now examine.—From Oct. 11, 1597, when the Admiral's men were allowed to reopen the Rose, which had been closed since July 28, 1597 (cf. i. 124-125), till Jan. 21, 1599, Alleyn is only mentioned thrice as having anything to do with the Admiral's company. On Oct. 21, Nov. 5, and Dec. 8, 1597, he witnessed three business transactions between Henslowe and the company (Diary, ed. Greg, 82). That Alleyn acted as a witness in these transactions is, of course, no evidence that he had any connection with the Admiral's company at the time. On

Jan. 21, 1599, Henslowe entered the following item in the Diary:—

> 'pd vnto my sonne Edward alleyn the 21 of Janewary for the playe of vayvod for the company the some of xxxx^{s} J saye pd ^{1598} . xxxx^{s}.'
> (Diary, ed. Greg, 101.)

This entry obviously does not establish any close relationship between Alleyn and the company. On Jan. 30, April 7, and Sept. 28, 1599, Alleyn acted as a witness for Henslowe, but the entries do not in any way connect Alleyn with the Admiral's company (Diary, ed. Greg, 161, 106). About July, 1600, occurs the following entry:

> '[The full some of our debt] [p] payd to Mr Allen by Mr Henslowe in behalfe of the company the some of xj^{ll} wch is the remainder of a debt of l^{ll} for the payment of wch we stood bound in a C^{ll} . . . . . xj^{ll}.'
> (Diary, ed. Greig, 122.)

This establishes nothing but that the Admiral's company owed Alleyn money. The list of the shareholders of the company for July 10, which follows the above entry does not contain Alleyn's name (Diary, ed. Greg, 123). From Oct. 11, 1597, to July, 1601, then, there is no evidence that Alleyn had any close connection with the Admiral's company.

About November, 1600, the Fortune Theatre was probably finished, and the Admiral's company began to act there (cf. i. 128-129). On Nov. 11, the following entry occurs in the Diary (ed. Greg, 124):—

> 'Lent vnto the company the 11 of novemb^{r} 1600 to paye vnto my sonne E Alleyn a bowt ther composicion the some of fower pownd^{e} J saye lent . . . . . iiij^{ll}.'

Immediately following is:—

> 'pd vnto my sonne Alleyn for the firste weckes playe the xj parte of xvii^{ll} ix^{s} wch came to therti & ij shelling^{e} J say pd . . . . xxxii^{s}.'

These entries seem to show that E. Alleyn was again closely connected with the Admiral's company, though they are indecisive as to whether he played with them or merely received his share of the profits as part owner of the Fortune. That Alleyn was one of the managers of these men as Fleay suggests (Stage, 140), is improbable, because from this date Henslowe seems to have charge of all payments for properties or to authors, sometimes paying the author directly, on his own responsibility, sometimes 'at the appointment of the company,' and sometimes at the appointment of one of the players, such as Bourne alias Birde, or Rowley (Diary, ed. Greg, 125). Alleyn appears as a witness to business transactions of Henslowe on Jan. 23, 1600, and Dec. 15, 1600, but these entries are indecisive as to his relations with the company (Diary, ed. Greg, 125, 133). On May 4, 1601, Henslowe enters the following item:—

> 'R7 of m^r E Alleyn the 4 of maye 1601 the some of twentyeyght pownde & tenneshellenge wch he Receued at the corte for ther cort mony for playnge ther at cryssmas wch was dewe vnto the earlle of nothingames players & J Receued yt in p^t of a more some I say R7 . . . xxviii^ll x^s.'

This entry almost certainly indicates that Alleyn played with the company at Court during Christmas, 1600-1601. The next mention of Alleyn occurs on May 22, 1601, and confirms the above evidence that he was again a member of the Admiral's company. It is :—

> 'pd at the a poyntment of E Alleyn the 22 of may 1601 vnto Thomas deckers in fulle payment of a boocke called kynge sebastian of portyngoll the some of . . . . . iij^ll.'
> (Diary, ed. Greig, 137.)

This is the first time since 1597 that Alleyn has thus authorised Henslowe to buy things for the company. The entries which follow this leave little doubt that Alleyn was now a member of the company :—

> 'Layd owt at the a poyntment of my sonne & the company vnto harey cheattell for the altrynge of the booke of carnowlle wollsey the 28 of June 1601 the some of . . . xx^s.'
> (Ibid., 143.)

'Lent vnto m^r alleyn the 25 of septemb3 1601 to lend vnto Bengemen Johnson vpon his writtinge of his adicians in geronymo the some of . . . . . xxxx^s.'
(Diary, ed. Greig, 149.)

'Lent vnto my sonne & w^m Jube the 31 of Septemb3 1601 to bye divers thinges & sewttes & stockenes for the play of the weaste enges the som of . . . . . x^ll x^s.'
(Ibid.)

'Lent at the apoyntment of the company & my sonne vnto hary chettell in earneste of a playe called to good to be trewe or northern Man the some of the 14 of novemb3 1601 . . . . . v^s.'
(Ibid., 151.)

'p^d at the apoyntment of E Alleyn the 6 of Janewary 1601 in pte of payment of a Boocke called the spaneshe fygge the some of . . iii^ll.'
(Ibid., 153.)

'pd at the a poyntmente of E Alleyn for the companye vnto the cope lace man for lace the 25 of Janewary 1601 the some of . . . xxxv^s.'
(Ibid., 164.)

Yet at the end of the account containing these entries, Alleyn's name does not appear among the shareholders of the company. The probable explanation of this, as well as of the fact that Henslowe often distinguishes between his son-in-law and the company in the above entries, is that Alleyn, though acting with the company, was not for business purposes a shareholder in the company, but was, with Henslowe, the owner of the theatre in which the company acted, and of a goodly share of their properties, plays, etc., in other words, was one of the capitalists financing their affairs.

On February 23, 1602, Henslowe opened a new account with the Admiral's men. From this account it appears that Alleyn's relation to the company till Nov. 3, 1602, was the same as before Feb. 23, for he often authorises Henslowe to buy plays, etc., for the company. Though the account does not close till May 5, 1603, Alleyn is not mentioned in it after Nov. 3, 1602 (Diary, ed. Greg, 165-174). The Diary gives no further accounts of the Lord Admiral's men, and consequently no more evidence of the relation of the company and Alleyn after May, 1603.

From the evidence in the Diary then, it appears that Edward Alleyn had little connection with the Admiral's company, from Oct. 11, 1597, till the opening of the Fortune about November, 1600. After this Alleyn's connection with the company is closer, but there is nothing to show that he acted with them till Christmas, 1600-1, when he seems to have played at Court as an Admiral's man. From Christmas, 1600-1, till November, 1602, Alleyn seems to have been intimately connected with the company, probably acting with them, though for business purposes to be regarded not as an ordinary shareholder in the company, but as part proprietor of the theatre in which they acted and of their plays and properties.

The second part of the evidence bearing on Edward Alleyn's retirement from the stage consists of the records of payment to the Admiral's company for playing at Court from 1597 to 1604. These payments are as follows :—

1597-8, ...	Robert Shaw and Thomas Dutton were paid for the company on Dec. 3, 1598.
1599-1600. Christmas, .	Robert Shaw was paid for the company on Feb. 18, 1600.
1600-1601. Christmas, .	Edward Alleyn 'servante to the Lord Admyrall' was paid for the company on March 31, 1601.
1602-3. Christmas, . .	Edward Alleyn, 'and the rest of his Companie' were paid on April 22, 1602.
1604. January 21, . .	'Edward Allen and Edward Jubie' were paid for the company on Feb. 19, 1604.
1604. February 19, . .	Edward Juby was paid for the company on April 17, 1604.

After 1604 Alleyn's name does not appear in the Court payments to the company (cf. i. 138 f. ; 225-226).

These payments seem to indicate that Edward Alleyn was not acting as a regular member of the Admiral's company during 1598-9, for if he had been acting regularly with these men he, as their principal player, would most likely have received the payments to them for Court performances. By Christmas, 1600-1, he is obviously again acting with the Admiral's men, and continues with them till February, 1604 (they were then known as Prince Henry's men). The way in which Alleyn is mentioned in these payments, i.e. as 'servante to the Lord Admyrall,' Edward Alleyn 'and the rest of his Companie,' 'Edward Allen and Edward Jubie,' can hardly mean anything but that Alleyn was acting with the company, at least when at Court.

The third part of the evidence concerning Alleyn's retirement from the stage is contained in two letters, of Jan. 12, and April 8, 1600, from the Lord Admiral to the Justices of Middlesex concerning the building of the Fortune. These letters read as follows :—

(1) 'Whereas my servant, Edward Allen, in respect of the dangerous decaye of that howse which he and his Companye have nowe on the Banck, and for that the same standeth verie noysome for resorte of people in the wynter tyme, hath nowe of late taken a plott of grounde neere Redcrosse streete London (verie fitt and convenient) for the buildinge of a new howse theare, and hath provided tymber and other necessaries for the effectinge theareof, to his greate chardge. (Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, 57.)

The statements of these letters do not appear, at first sight, to be in strict accord with the conclusions pointed to by the Diary and the payments for Court performances. In the first letter, dated Jan. 12, 1600, Nottingham refers to

'the acceptable service, which my said servant [i.e. Alleyn] and his Companie have doen and presented before her Highnes to her greate lykeinge and contentment, as well this last Christmas as att sondrie other tymes' etc. This can only refer to the performances at Court by the Admiral's men during Christmas, 1599-1600, and must mean that Alleyn acted at that time and was regarded by the Queen and Nottingham as a regular member of the company. Yet on that occasion Shaw and not Alleyn received payment for the company, and, according to the Diary, Alleyn had little connection with the Admiral's men from 1597 till about November, 1600.

These apparent inconsistencies are, however, easily explained. The Lord Admiral would certainly know very little about the internal arrangements of the company under his patronage. What he did know was that Edward Alleyn, who had been the leading player in his company for several years, continued to appear after 1597 at the Court performances of the company, and in 1600 wished to build a new theatre for that company. He naturally concluded that Alleyn was still a regular member of the company, and so stated in his letters of Jan. 12 and April 8, 1600. How inaccurate the Admiral's information about the affairs of the company was is conclusively shown in the second letter. In that he states that the Rose (i.e. 'an other howse') was pulled down and that the company had ceased acting by April, 1600. Both these statements are incorrect (cf. i. 128 f).

The evidence of the Diary, of the Court payments to the Admiral's men, and the letters of the Lord Admiral for Jan. 12, and April 8, 1600, shows fairly conclusively that from Oct. 11, 1597, to c. Nov., 1600, Edward Alleyn did not act with the Admiral's men except at their Court performances, and that from the latter date till 1603, when the Diary ends, that Alleyn appears as a regular acting member of the company. If this is the case there can be little doubt that Alleyn again began acting regularly with the company about the time of the opening of the Fortune, probably in November, 1600, when his popularity as an actor would go far to bring success to the new theatre which he and Henslowe had built. That Alleyn's name does not occur in the 1602 list of the shareholders of the Admiral's company does not overthrow the above conclusion, because, most likely, for business purposes Alleyn was not a member of the company, but was associated with Henslowe as part owner of the Fortune and financial backer of the company.

These conclusions are confirmed by the facts that Alleyn appears in the only approximately complete list of the Admiral's company from 1600 to 1603, that of I. Tamer Cam, Oct. 2, 1602, and that in 1604 after the company had been transferred to the patronage of Prince Henry, Alleyn is mentioned as their head player (cf. i. 207).

When Edward Alleyn finally quitted the stage is doubtful. Mr. Collier was certain that Alleyn did not act after 1612, and thought about 1606 the most likely date of his final appearance on the boards. Mr. Warner thought c. November, 1604, when Alleyn became with Henslowe joint master of the royal games of bears, etc. Mr. Rendle fixed no date, but thought Alleyn acted occasionally till 1612. Mr. Fleay considers that Alleyn did not act after 1597, except in the revival of I. Tamar Cam on Oct. 2, 1602. Of these opinions Mr. Warner's is probably the correct one, for (a) after November, 1604, when Alleyn and Henslowe purchased the office of game master from Sir William Stuart, Alleyn seems to have given his personal supervision to this part of the Alleyn-Henslowe ventures (Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 65). As the King and Prince greatly delighted in bear-baiting and bull-baiting, Alleyn was undoubtedly kept busy overseeing such performances. (b) The last appearance of Alleyn in a list of the Prince's men is in 1604 (cf. i. 207 f.) (c) On Feb. 19, 1604, for the last time, Alleyn received the money for a Court performance by his company (cf. i. 225). (d) By 1604 Alleyn was in such an easy financial position as not to need the money gained by his personal exertions on the boards. He had interests in the Rose, the Fortune, and probably Paris Garden. He was Master of Games and held property in Kennington, Southwark, and Firle in Sussex, and on Oct. 25, 1605, he bought for £5000 (£3000 remaining at interest) the Manor of Dulwich. (e) The occasional references to Alleyn till 1612, as the 'Prince's servant,' are probably merely formal, and are applied to him because he had been a regular member of the Prince's dramatic company and still often assisted in planning theatrical exhibitions, bear-baiting, etc., for the Prince (Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, 65). It seems, then, that Alleyn finally 'left playing' about November, 1604, when he became 'Master of the King's Games.'

(c)

Thomas Heywood's connection with the 3, Lord Admiral's Company.

Just when Thomas Heywood first became connected with the Admiral's company is uncertain. If Mr. Fleay's identification of the first form of Heywood's The Four Prentices of London, with the Conquest of Jerusalem, with The second part of Godfrey of Bulloigne, performed by the Admiral's men on July 19, 1594, be correct,[1] Heywood was most likely connected with this company as early as 1594. However, this may be, about October 14, 1596, Heywood is mentioned as a writer for the Admiral's company. Henslowe then enters the following item in the Diary (ed. Greg, 45) :—'lent vnto them' (i.e. E. Alleyn, Martin Slaughter, James Dunstan and Edward Juby) 'for hawodes bocke . . . xxx^{s}.'

That Heywood's connection with the Admiral's company was from the first that of an actor as well as a dramatist is practically certain, for throughout his career he seems to have combined the two professions.[2] On March 25, 1598, Heywood agreed to act with the Admiral's men for two years. The agreement reads thus :—

'm^{r} (do) that this 25 of marche 1598 Thomas hawoode came & hiered hime seallfe wth me as a covenante

[1] Fleay, Drama, i. 282. Mr. Fleay's evidence is, Heywood refers in The Four Prentices, etc., probably first in the lost edition of c. 1610, to having written the play fifteen or sixteen years before, in the infancy of his judgment and first practice, i.e. c. 1594. In June 19, 1594, was entered in the S. R. for J. Dauler, Godfrey of Bulloigne, with the Conquest of Jerusalem, an interlude. This Mr. Fleay guesses to have been the first part of Godfrey of Bulloigne, etc. From July 19 to Sept. 16, 1595, the Admiral's men acted the Second Part of Godfrey of Bulloigne, at the Rose. In the Prologue to the Four Prentices, spoken by three in black cloakes, it appears that the play had had another title, True and Strange, and the scene is mentioned as Jerusalem, and the last line of the play, Now Sion and Jerusalem are one, accounts for the second part of the title, The Conquest of Jerusalem.

[2] Kirkman, the bookseller, said that Heywood was 'very laborious; for he not only acted almost every day, but also obliged himself to write a sheet every day for several years together,' cf. Select Plays by Thomas Heywood, Mermaid Series, 1888, Introd. 14.

This entry is probably one of re-engagement, and does not necessarily imply that between 1596 and March, 1598, Heywood had left the Admiral's company, for the same form of engagement is used by Henslowe in hiring actors who had been continuously connected with his company up to the time of re-engagement (Diary, ed. Greg, 202-203). Besides, though there is no evidence that Heywood left the Admiral's company there is a fair probability that his 1, 2, Iron Age were acted by these men in 1597, and that he was the author of Five Plays in one, acted by the same company on April 7, 1597, at the Rose (Fleay, Drama, i. 283-287).

Mr. A. W. Ward, commenting on the 1598 engagement of Heywood by Henslowe, says that Heywood 'is mentioned by the manager as a regular member, and presumably (no wages being noted), a sharer in the Lord Admiral's company' (Ward, History, ii. 551). That Heywood was a shareholder in the Admiral's company is unlikely, for he is never mentioned among the shareholders of the company, and it does not seem to have been Henslowe's custom to mention the wages to be paid an actor in his written agreements. The entry immediately preceding the engagement of Heywood is a similar agreement with Richard Alleyn, who was never, so far as is known, a shareholder in the Admiral's company, and in this case also no note is made of the wages to be paid (Diary, ed. Greg, 204).

Heywood is usually supposed to have left the Admiral's men in 1599, and joined Derby's company. The evidence for this is the assumption that The Bold Beachams, The Trial of Chivalry, and the 1, 2, Edward IV., which were acted by Derby's men, were written by Heywood. The dates and authorship of the first two plays are very doubtful, but the 1, 2, Edward IV. were published about August, 1599, and are almost certainly Heywood plays (Ward, History, ii. 555; Mr. Fleay, however, throws some doubt on Heywood's authorship of 1, 2, Edward IV., cf Drama, i. 287-289). But if Heywood acted with the Earl of Derby's men in 1599 he must have forfeited £40 to Henslowe for breaking his agreement of 1598, which bound him to act with the Admiral's men till March, 1600. As Heywood would be very unlikely to do this, it is safer to suppose that while still acting with the Admiral's men he sold the 1, 2, Edward IV. to Derby's men. There is nothing to show that in 1598 Heywood agreed to write as well as act only for the Admiral's men.

Whether or not Heywood joined Derby's men in March, 1600, on the expiration of his agreement with Henslowe, there is nothing to show. At any rate, by about August, 1602, he was a member of the Earl of Worcester's company (cf. i. 52-53).[1]

Ben Jonson's connection with the 3, Lord Admiral's Company.

Ben Jonson seems to have become connected with the Admiral's company and Henslowe about July 28, 1597, for on that date appear the first entries concerning him in the Diary. These entries are as follows :—

(a) 'lent vnto Bengemen Johnson player the 28 of July 1597 in Redey mony the some of fower powndes to be payd yt agayne when so euer ether J or any for me shall demande yt J saye . . . . . iiii^{ll}
wittnes E Alleyn & John Synger'
(Diary, ed. Greg, 200.)

(b) 'R7 of Bengemenes Johnsones Share as ffoloweth 1597
R7 the 28 of July 1597 . . . . . iii^{s}ix^{d}'[2]
(Diary, ed. Greig, 47.)

[1] At some time in his career Heywood seems to have been a theatrical servant of the Earl of Southampton, but at what date cannot be determined (Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, Apology for Actors, Introd. v.).

[2] The first two lines of this entry are crossed out.

From the latter entry it appears that Jonson had a share in one of Henslowe's theatrical ventures. The smallness of the amount precludes the possibility that Jonson was buying a share in the Rose, unless this payment was merely earnest money. Mr. Fleay plausibly conjectures that Jonson's share was in the Paris Garden, where he played Zulziman (Drama, i. 342). This and other details about Jonson are learnt from the following lines in Dekker's Satiro-mastrix:

'TUC[CA]. No Fye'st; my name 's Hamlet revenge; thou hast been at Parris garden hast not?

HOR[ACE]. Yes Captaine, I ha plaide Zulziman there.

SIR VAU[GHAN]. Then M. Horace you plaide the parte of an honest man.

TUC[CA]. Death of Hercules, he could never play that part well in 's life, no Fulkes you could not; thou call'st Demetrius Iorneyman Poet, but thou putst up a Supplication to be a poore Jorneyman Player, and hadst beene still so, but that thou couldst not set a good face upon't: thou hast forgot how thou amblest (in leather pilch) by a play-wagon, in the highway, and took'st mad Jeronimoes part, to get service among the mimickes: and when the Stagerites banisht thee into the Ile of Dogs, thou turn'dst Ban-dog (villanous Guy) & ever since bitest therefore I aske if th 'ast been at Parris-garden, because thou hast such a good mouth; thou baitst well, read, lege, save thyselfe and read.'

For which company of travelling players Jonson played Jeronimo with such poor success as to be banished into 'the Isle of Dogs' is uncertain. With whom he acted Zulziman at the Paris Garden is also unknown.

Jonson undoubtedly continued with the Admiral's company till September, 1598, when he had to leave the company. On Sept. 26, 1598, Henslowe wrote to Alleyn, 'Sence yow weare with me I have lost one of my company which hurteth me greatley, that is Gabrell, for he is slayen in hogesden fylldes by the hands of bengemen Jonson, bricklayer; therfore I wold fayne have a littel of your cownsell, yf I cowld' (Collier, Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, Shak. Soc. Pub., 1841, 51). Why Henslowe called Jonson, 'bricklayer' is hard to say, for Jonson must have given up that trade some time before, and on July 28, 1597, Henslowe had spoken of him as a 'player.' In October Jonson was arraigned at Old Bailey, 'forfeited his goods and chattels,' and escaped hanging by pleading benefit of clergy' (Athenæum, 1886, March 6).

After his release Jonson wrote for the Children of the Chapel and the Lord Chamberlain's men (Fleay, Drama, i. 344). By August 10, 1599, he was writing for the Admiral's men (Diary, ed. Greg, 110-112). In 1600-1 he was again writing for the Children of the Chapel (Fleay, Drama, i. 362, 365). On Sept. 25, 1601, he wrote 'his adicions in geronymo' for the Admiral's men, and probably continued to write for that company till he wrote Sejanus for the King's men in 1603 (Diary, ed. Greg, 149, 168; Fleay, Drama, i. 371).

Whether or not Jonson acted after his release in 1598 is doubtful. Dekker in 1601 (Satiro-mastrix was acted 1601) taunts him with being a poor actor and seems to imply that he was no longer on the boards. That Jonson would cease playing as soon as he could afford to do so there can be no doubt. As he was known as one of the best dramatists of the day by 1598 he probably stopped acting soon after that date (Meres, Palladis Tamia, 1598, mentions Jonson as one of the 'best for tragedie').

Discussions of Special Points in connection with the London Companies, 1603-1642

I. The 'Duchess of Malfi' List of the 1, King's Company

The Duchess of Malfi supplies us with a puzzling list of the 1, King's men. It is impossible to fix with exactness the date of production of the play, which was first printed in 1623. Mr. Sampson thus sums up the evidence in the case: 'We find these to be our certainties; The White Devil was written between 1607 and 1612; The Duchess of Malfi between 1609 and 1618-19; and there is nothing that requires for the former a date after 1610, or for the latter a date after 1612. The presumption seems strong that the two plays are near together in point of time, that the Duchess of Malfi is the later play, that it is not far in time from A Monumental Columne (1613). I infer, accordingly, that The White Devil was finished in 1610, and The Duchess of Malfi in 1611.' (The White Devil and The Duchess of Malfi by John Webster, ed., Martin W. Sampson, 1904, Introd. xliv. For other discussions of the date of The Duchess of Malfi, cf. John Webster, the Periods of his work as determined by his relations to the Drama of his Day, E. E. Stoll, 1905, 22, etc.; Drama, ii. 273; Sidney Lee, 'John Webster' in Dict. Nat. Biog.; Dr. Wallace, Shakespeare in London, Times, Oct. 2 and 4, 1909).

The Quarto of 1623 'As it was Presented privatly, at the Black-Friers; and publiquely at the Globe, By the Kings

Maiesties Servants,' gives the following list of actors and their parts :—

'Bosola,	J. Lowin.
Ferdinand,	1. R. Burbidge, 2. J. Taylor.
Cardinall,	1. H. Cundaile, 2. R. Robinson.
Antonio,	1. W. Ostler, 2. R. Benfield.
Delio,	J. Underwood.
Forobosco,	N. Tooley.
Marquesse of Pescara,	J. Rice.
Silvio,	T. Pollard.
The severall mad-men,	N. Towley, J Underwood, etc.
The Dutchesse,	R. Sharpe.
The Cardinals Mis,	J. Thomson.
The Doctor, Cariola, Court officers,	R. Pallant.'

The probable reason why the names of two actors are given for the parts of Ferdinand, the Cardinal, and Antonio, is that in the original production Burbadge, Condell, and Ostler took these parts, and in the revival Taylor, Robinson, and Benfield succeeded them. If this be the case it is almost certain that this revival was between March 13, 1619, when Burbadge died, and 1623, when the Quarto was printed.

The actors mentioned in the Quarto, with the exception of Burbadge, Condell, and Ostler, are probably those who took part in the 1619-23 revival, for in 1611 Rice was a Lady Elizabeth's man, and does not appear in any King's list till c. 1620, and Pollard, Sharp, and Thompson are not heard of as King's men till c. 1617 or later. As regards the other actors, Lowin, Underwood, and Tooley appear in King's lists from before 1611 till 1619-23. Taylor, who first appears as a King's man c. 1619, probably joined the company soon after Burbadge's death. Condell does not seem to have acted after 1619 (cf. i. opp. 172). Robinson, who succeeded him as the Cardinal in the Duchess of Malfi, seems to have played with the King's men from 1611 to 1642. Ostler was a King's man from c. 1610 to 1614 (he died Dec. 16, 1614, cf. Dr. Wallace, Times, Oct. 2, 1909), and Benfield from c. 1618 to 1642. Pallant was a Queen's man in 1609. He next appeared as a Lady Elizabeth's player in 1614. In 1616 he belonged to Prince Charles's company. By 1619 he was again a Queen's player. After this nothing further is heard of him. I have placed him conjecturally in the 1619-23 Duchess of Malfi list, though there is nothing known of his career which contradicts placing him in the c. 1611 list.

II. Bishop Williams and the performance of 'Midsummer Night's Dream' on Sept. 27, 1631

Mr. Collier quotes various documents from the Library of Lambeth Palace to show that on Nov. 10, 1631, John Spencer presented John Williams, Bishop of Lincoln, for having The Midsummer Night's Dream, performed at his house on Sunday night, Sept. 27, 1631. The King placed the matter in Laud's hands, and Spencer, as head of a self-constituted court among the Puritans condemned Williams to 'erect a free schoole at Eaton or else at Greate Staughton, and endowe the same with 20*l.* per ann. for the maintenance of the schoolmaster for ever.' This court also fined various persons who had witnessed the play as Williams's guests, and ordered Mr. Wilson 'a speciall plotter and contriver of this business,' who 'did in such a brutishe manner acte the same with an Asses head' to sit in the stocks 'attyred with his asse head, and a bottle of hay sett before him, and this subscription on his breast :—

> 'Good people I have played the beast,
> And brought ill things to passe:
> I was a man, but thus have made
> My selfe a silly Asse.'

(Collier, i. 459-463.)

Miss Toulmin Smith commenting on the references to Mr. Wilson, which are quoted in Ingleby's Centurie of Prayse (ed. Toulmin Smith, 182, ii.), says :—'I give this doubtful "allusion," because several, following Collier's Annals, have taken for granted that it refers to the Midsummer Night's Dream. Beyond these notices, however, there is nothing to tell with certainty what the play was. Near the bottom of page 3 in the margin have been written the words 'the play M Nights Dr.' but these are evidently the work of a later hand and these have been written over an erasure ; they are not in the hand of either Laud, Lincoln, or Spencer, or of the endorser of the paper, but look like a bad imitation of old writing. No reliance can be placed on them.'

The other details of the story as given by Collier are substantially repeated in the following account from John Spencer's Discourse of divers Petitions of High Concernment, etc., London, 1461 [1641], 18-20,—' one Mr. Wilson a cunning Musition having contrived a curious Comodie, and plotted it so, that he must needs have it acted upon the Sunday night, for he was to go the next day toward the Court ; the Bishop put it off till nine of the clock at night : a while after, the Commissarie, Doctor Morrison, kept a Court at Huntington, and I came thither and went into the seat with the Commissarie, and put on my hat : the Doctors and Divines stood with hats off, and gave their attendance ; then some offered their presentment, but I told Master Commissarie, that I had a presentment, and that must be the first, and so he took it, and read it, the tennour was thus :

' We do here present John Lord Bishop of Lincolne, for having a Comedie acted in his house upon the Sunday, it began about nine of the clock at night, and continued till two or three of the clock the next morning. We do present also Sir Sidney Mountacute, and his Lady, for leaving their Parish Church to come to hear this Comedie. We here present Sir Thomas Headly, and his Lady for the like. We do present Master Wilson and other actors of the same.

' So when Master Commissarie had read it, he was somewhat amazed at it, and asked of me who was the Commissarie Generall, I bad him ask my Lord of Lincolne who was Commissary Generall.

' And this presentment we do make ; Ex officio,
' Commissarie Generall,
' JOHN SPENCER.

' So when this was registered, I took my leave of Master Commissarie and came away, for feare I should hear something else : And afterwards, because the Bishop did not appear, I censured him for his fault to build a Schole-house at Eeaton, and to endue it with twenty pounds a year for the maintenance of the Schole-master. Sir Sidney Mountacute to give five pounds and five coats to five poor women, and his Lady five gowns and five pounds for five poor widdows: and this censure stands still unrepealed

'A copie.'

This account of the matter is preceded in the Discourse by a letter from Spencer to Williams, dated from Haughton More on Nov. 4, 1631, desiring him to submit to the censure, because of the good example it would give, and the 'danting and discouragement' to those who were Sabbath breakers. This letter is very similar (in some places it repeats word for word) to the letter quoted by Collier from Spencer to some lady, probably either 'Lady Mountacute or Lady Headly,' who was present at the play (Discourse, etc., 16-18).

It was also, no doubt, to this performance that Dr. Peter Heylen refers in his Examen Historicum: or A Discovery and Examination of the Mistakes, Falsities, and Defects In some modern Histories, etc. (London, 1659, 243), where he says Bishop Williams 'caused a comedy to be acted before him at his house at Bugden, not only on a Sunday in the afternoon, but upon such a Sunday also on which he had publicly given sacred orders both to priests and deacons. And to this comedy he invited the Earl of Manchester, and divers of the neighbouring gentry.'

Moreover Bishop Hacket in his biography of Williams, says, 'I have not done with the Governance of this Family, which was worse thought of by some strict-censurers, because the Bishop admitted in his publick Hall a comedy once or twice to be presented before him, exhibited by his own servants for an evening Recreation' (Bk. II. 37).

There can be no doubt then, that with the exception of the statement that the play given was the Midsummer Night's Dream, Collier's account of the performance at Bishop Williams's house is substantially correct, and that Mr. Fleay, who says 'the whole thing is a fabrication,' is wrong (Stage, 344).

III. Business Affairs at the Globe and Blackfriars Theatres.[1]

I

(Since this discussion was in print Dr. Wallace has published in the Times of October 2 and 4, 1909, his conclusions concerning business matters at the Globe and Blackfriars from 1599 to c. 1616, and one of the documents on which he bases these conclusions. As all these new documents are not available, it is impossible at the moment to thoroughly rework the opinions set forth. However, I quote in part Dr. Wallace's conclusions. Concerning the Globe he says: 'On February 21, 1599, Nicolas Brend, Esquire (father of the yet unborn Sir Matthew who in 1630-35 made trouble over this grant), leased the new company a site for the Globe, term to begin December 25, 1598, and run 31 years. By this lease the Burbage brothers acquired one-half interest in the new premises at a yearly rental of £7, 5s. Their associates, Shakespeare, Hemyngs, Phillipps, Pope, and Kemp, acquired the other half at a like yearly rental of £7, 5s.

'At the beginning, then, the Burbages had five-tenths and Shakespeare and fellows each one-tenth, interest in the new and doubtful venture. This division into tenths continued until 1610, when Shakespeare and associates divided their half into sixths and admitted Henry Condell with them, making each share one-twelfth of the whole. . . . On February 21, 1612, Shakespeare and the five others associated with him again divided their half, this time into sevenths, and admitted William Osteler on an equal basis with themselves, each of them thus holding one-fourteenth of the Globe.

'The above division and condition remained not only until Shakespeare's death, but until the division into sixteenths when Nathaniel Field was admitted to shareship.')

In 1599, when Richard and Cuthbert Burbage built the Globe, they 'joyned' to themselves 'those deserving men, Shakspere, Hemings, Condall, Philips and others, partners in the profittes of that they call the House.'[2] Who the 'others' were we cannot be sure. The other important actors in the company in 1599 were Thomas Pope, Will Sly, probably Christopher Beeston, Will Kemp, and John Duke.[3] As the Globe was divided into sixteen shares all these men

[1] Dr. Charles William Wallace promises us a final settlement of the difficult questions involved in this discussion when his recently discovered documents bearing on the matter are published (cf. The Children of the Chapel at Blackfriars, 1597-1603, x.).

[2] Outlines, i. 317.

[3] Cf. i. 103.

may have been shareholders. In the case of Pope we can be certain, for in his will, dated July 22, 1603, he mentioned 'all my part, estate and interest, which I have, or ought to have, of, in, and to all that playhouse, with the appurtenances, called the Globe, in the parish of St. Saviour's, in the county of Surrey.'[1] This statement of Pope's also seems to show that the men mentioned by C. Burbage as the original 'partners' in the Globe, were what in 1635 were termed 'housekeepers,' that is, men who owned outright a 'part or parts' of the sixteen 'parts' into which the Globe was divided, and had the right to bequeath their holdings to whom they wished,[2] for Pope willed his interest in the Globe to Marie Clark, alias Wood, and Thomas Bromley, who had no other known connection with the theatre.[3]

In 1635 the profits from the Globe were thus divided: the 'housekeepers' received half the profits arising from the galleries, the boxes, and the tireing-house; and the 'actor-sharers,' i.e., all the actors who were not hired-men or boys received the other half of the profits from the galleries, the boxes, and the tireing-house, and all the takings at the outer doors. At Blackfriars the division was the same, except that the 'housekeepers' did not receive a share in the profits from the tireing-house door. If a 'housekeeper' was also an actor, he received an actor's share in addition to his 'housekeeper's' share. Out of their profits the 'actor-sharers' had to 'defray all charges of the house whatsoever, viz., wages to hired-men and boyes, musicke, lightes, &c., . . . besides the extraordinary charge which the said actors are wholly at for apparell and poets &c.,' and the 'housekeepers' had to pay the rent on the leases and keep the theatre in good repair.[4] Apparently the original purchase money for boys also came out of the 'actor-sharers'' part of the profits, for Shank, in 1635, said he 'of his owne purse supplyed the company for the service of his Majesty with boyes, as Thomas Pollard, John Thompson deceased (for whom hee payed 40 li.), your suppliant haveing payd his part of 200 li. for other boyes since his comming to the company, John Honiman, Thomas Holcome and diverse others, and at this time maintaines three more for the sayd service.' Now, as Shank did not become a 'housekeeper' till c. 1633, and all these boys had been taken into the company long before that, he must have paid his share for them out of his profits as an 'actor-sharer,' and not as a 'housekeeper' (there can be little doubt that the company reimbursed him for his outlay on Pollard and Thompson).[1]

By 1603 Ch. Beeston, W. Kemp, and John Duke had left the King's men. Before leaving, they, no doubt, sold their interests in the Globe and Blackfriars (if they had any such interests) to other members of that company. From 1603 to c. 1630 it is impossible to fix accurately who were the 'housekeepers,' and who the 'actor-sharers' at these theatres. The Burbages, Shakespeare, J. Hemings, and Condell were certainly 'housekeepers'; beyond this we have no clue. The official list of May 17, 1603,[2] does not include 'housekeepers' only, for Pope, who in his will of July, 1603, speaks of his share in the Globe, is not mentioned. Equally indecisive are the official list of 1604, and the list obtained from Phillipps's will of May 4, 1605.

At the trial of 1635 C. Burbage said, 'but makeing the leases for twenty-one yeeres hath beene the destruction of ourselves and others, for they dyeing at the expiration of three or four yeeres of their lease, the subsequent yeeres became dissolved to strangers, as by marrying with their widdowes and the like by their children.'[3] As the old 'housekeepers' died or left the company their shares seem to have been gradually bought in by the Burbages, J. Hemings, and Condall. Shakespeare probably sold his

[1] Outlines, i. 316. Mr. Fleay thinks that the boys were purchased by the 'housekeepers.' He says, 'The boy actors were purchased from other companies or brought up as apprentices by the housekeepers, and I presume their reimbursement must have come by way of payment for their acting out of the same general fund' (Stage, 327). Mr. Fleay fails to state his evidence for this theory. He has, also, overlooked the fact that according to his list of 'housekeepers' for 1628 (Stage, 326) all the boys then in the company must have been apprenticed to John Hemings, the only 'housekeeper' who had ever been an actor. As Hemings was at that time an old man who had not played for several years, it is inconceivable that he had the oversight of the training of all the boys in the company, and that they were his apprentices.

[2] Cf. i. 146. Mr. Fleay asserts 'We are on sure ground after Phillips's death. Shakespeare, Burbage, Condell and Hemings were sole and equal housekeepers (Stage, 325). What his evidence for this statement is I have been unable to discover.

[3] Outlines, i. 317.

about 1611.[1] When R. Burbage died in March, 1619, he bequeathed his shares to his widow who, later, married a Mr. Robinson, possibly Richard Robinson of the company, and appeared as Mrs. Robinson in the trial of 1635.[2] Condell died in December, 1627, and his shares passed to his widow.[3] This last date enables us to fix approximately the year to which Benefield, Pollard and Swanston refer in their statement: 'That the house of the Globe was formerly divided into sixteen partes, whereof Mr. Cutbert Burbidge and his sisters had eight, Mrs. Condall four, and Mr. Hemings four.'[4] It must be after Condell's death in Dec., 1627, as his widow is mentioned as holding his shares. John Hemings died in Oct., 1630,[5] and his shares passed to his son William Hemings. Consequently the 'housekeepers' at the Globe, between Dec., 1627, and Oct., 1630, were :—

C. Burbage, ...	4 shares.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	4 shares.
J. Hemings, ...	4 shares.
Mrs. Condell, ...	4 shares.

and directly after Oct., 1630 :—

C. Burbage, ...	4 shares.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	4 shares.
W. Hemings, ...	4 shares.
Mrs. Condell, ...	4 shares.

It seems likely that when William Hemings inherited his father's shares in October, 1630, the injustice of none of the 'housekeepers' being actors was so obvious, that Lowin and Taylor were then made 'housekeepers,' with two shares each; one part being taken 'from Mr. Hemings, two partes from Mrs. Condall, and halfe a part a peece from Mr. Burbidge and his sister.'[6] So shortly after October, 1630, the 'housekeepers' at the Globe were as follows :—

C. Burbage, ...	3½ shares.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	3½ shares.
W. Hemings, ...	3 shares.
Mrs. Condell, ...	2 shares.
J. Taylor, ...	2 shares.
John Lowin, ...	2 shares.[7]

[7] Mr. Fleay dates the redistribution of the shares in the Globe after 1627

Shank, probably about June, 1635, states that 'about allmost two yeeres since,' i.e. c. June, 1633, he bought one part in the Globe and one part in Blackfriars from W. Hemings, and 'about eleven months since,' i.e. c. July, thus :—1628. 4, C. Burbage ; 4, Mrs. Robinson ; 4, Hemings [i.e. J. Hemings] ; 4, Mrs. Condell ; c. 1629. 3½, C. Burbage ; 3½, Mrs. Robinson ; 3, J. Hemings ; 2, Mrs. Condell ; 2, Taylor ; 2, Lowin. He is quite positive about the 1628 division and rather doubtful about the c. 1629 division. He thus states his evidence, 'when Condell died (he was buried 29th December, 1627) his shares in like manner passed to his widow ; so that in 1628 there were again four equal housekeepers—Hemings, C. Burbadge, Mrs. Robinson, and Mrs. Condell. Between 1628 and 1635 Taylor and Lowin purchased two shares each, viz., two shares from Mrs. Condell, one from Hemings, and a half each from C. Burbadge and Mrs. Robinson. Hemings died 10th October, 1630, and his shares were sold "surreptitiously" by his son William Hemings : one in 1633, c. June 24, and two in 1634, to Shank' (Stage, 325-326). Now this theory is obviously based on the supposition that the admission of Taylor and Lowin as 'housekeepers' was before the death of J. Hemings and the passing of his shares to his son William. But the documents of 1635 contain no evidence of this. Let us examine the statements involved—(1) Benefield, Swanston and Pollard in stating their case say, 'That the house of the Globe was formerly divided into sixteen partes, whereof Mr. Cuthbert Burbidge and his sisters had eight, Mrs. Condall four and Mr. Hemings four. That Mr. Tailor and Mr. Lowen were long since admitted to purchase four partes betwixt them from the rest, vizt., one part from Mr. Hemings, two partes from Mrs. Condall, and halfe a part a peece from Mr. Burbidge and his sister. That the three partes remaining to Mr. Hemings were afterwardes by Mr. Shankes surreptitiously purchased from him, etc.' (Outlines, i. 312). There is nothing in these statements to indicate that the 'Mr. Hemings' of the first two sentences was John Hemings, and the 'Mr. Hemings' of the third sentence was William Hemings. As the passage stands, there being no distinction made between the 'Mr. Hemings,' it is natural to consider that they all refer to William Hemings, to whom the third sentence unquestionably refers (Outlines, i. 314 ; also the statements about Blackfriars, Ibid., i. 312, and below). (2) Concerning his three shares in the Globe and two in Blackfriars, Shank says, 'And whereas John Heminges, the father of William Hemings, of whome your suppliant made purchase of the sayd partes, injoyed the same thirty yeeres without any molestacion, beeing the most of the said yeeres both player and housekeper, and after hee gave over playing diverse yeeres ; and his sonne, William Hemings, fower yeers after, though hee never had anything to doe with the sayd stage, injoyed the same without any trouble, etc.' (Outlines, i. 316). Though Shank's statements of length of time cannot be taken as absolutely accurate, for he speaks of William Hemings as enjoying the shares in the Globe for four years, whereas he sold one in 1633 and two in 1634, having obtained them after his father's death in 1630, yet there is certainly no evidence here to substantiate Mr. Fleay's theory that J. Hemings parted with one of his shares before his death in 1630. It seems a more natural reading of the evidence to suppose that in 1630 J. Hemings left his four shares to W. Hemings, and that from W. Hemings, Taylor and Lowin, and later Shank, got their shares.

1634, he bought two parts in the Globe and one in Blackfriars from W. Hemings.[1] Consequently the 'housekeepers' at the Globe in 1634-5, were :—

C. Burbage, ...	3½ shares.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	3½ shares.
Shank, ...	3 shares.
Mrs. Condell, . . .	2 shares.
Taylor, ...	2 shares.
Lowin, ...	2 shares.

After the petition of Benefield, Swanston, and Pollard was granted in 1635 the 'housekeepers' at the Globe were :—

C. Burbage, ...	2½ shares.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	2½ shares.
Shank, ...	2 shares.
Taylor, ...	2 shares.
Lowin, ...	2 shares.
Swanston, ...	1 share.
Pollard, ...	1 share.
Benefield, ...	1 share.[2]

Of any change in this apportionment of 'housekeepers'' shares between 1635 and 1642 we have no information.

II

(Concerning the Blackfriars Dr. Wallace says: 'On August 8, 1608, Burbage leased the Blackfriars to certain of his fellow actors, with term to begin June 24 preceding. He himself kept one-seventh, and leased one-seventh each to Shakespeare, Hemyngs, Cuthbert Burbage, Condell, Slye, and Thomas Evans for a period of 21 years, each to pay an annual rental of £5, 14s. 4d.

'William Slye died about five days after the above lease. His share was surrendered by his executrix to Richard Burbage, the owner.

'On May 20, 1611, near the date of Osteler's marriage with Thomasina Hemyngs, Slye's former share was leased by Richard Burbage to William Osteler, with term to begin March 25 preceding. This division of Blackfriars remained until and after Shakespeare's death.')

The 'housekeepers' at Blackfriars before 1630 are known with some certainty, though it is impossible to be sure of the number of shares held by each. The old Blackfriars building had been turned into a theatre by James Burbage, then leased by him to Evans and the Children of the Chapel. When the boys grew up, some of them were taken into the King's company, and in 1610 C. and R. Burbage, who had inherited the property rights in the theatre from their father in 1597, placed that company, 'which were Hemings, Condall, Shakspeare, etc.,' in Blackfriars. The Burbages state that Hemings and Condell had their shares in Blackfriars 'for nothing.'[1] So Cuthbert and Richard Burbage, Hemings and Condell were undoubtedly 'housekeepers' at the Blackfriars in 1610. In all probability Shakespeare was also a 'housekeeper,' as his name is mentioned by the Burbages with those of Hemings and Condell. Of any other 'housekeepers' we hear nothing. The 'housekeepers' at Blackfriars, then, c. 1610, were :—

[1] Outlines, i. 314. [2] Ibid., i. 313.

R. Burbage,
C. Burbage.
J. Hemings.
H. Condell.
W. Shakespeare (probably).

There is no indication of how the eight shares at Blackfriars[2] were divided among these men.

Between 1610 and 1630 some of the 'housekeepers' died, and their widows or sons inherited their shares. Shakespeare, no doubt, sold his about 1611.[3] So, shortly before J. Heming's death in Oct., 1630, the 'housekeepers' at Blackfriars were probably the same as at the Globe, i.e. :—

C. Burbage.
Mrs. Robinson (R. Burbage's widow).
J. Hemings—2 shares.[4]
Mrs. Condell (H. Condell's widow).

Directly after Oct., 1630, they would be :—

C. Burbage.
Mrs. Robinson.
W. Hemings—2 shares.
Mrs. Condell.

[1] Outlines, i. 317.
[2] Ibid., i. 312.
[3] Cf. above, 153-154.
[4] W. Hemings inherited two shares from his father (Outlines, i. 312).

If the above lists are correct, none of the 'housekeepers' after Oct., 1630, were actors. Probably the unfairness of this was so apparent that some of the leading actors were soon admitted 'housekeepers,' for in 1634-5 the housekeepers were :—

C. Burbage, ...	1 share.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	1 share.
Shank, ...	2 shares.
Mrs. Condell, . . .	1 share.
Taylor, ...	1 share.
Lowin, ...	1 share.
Underwood, ...	1 share.[1]

This list, however, which is given by Benefield, Pollard and Swanston in their 1635 petition, cannot be quite accurate, for according to both Shank and Burbage, Swanston, at the time of the trial, owned one-third of a share (Shank said Swanston had owned it for two or three years).[2]

When the petition of Swanston, Pollard and Benefield was settled in 1635, Shank was forced to give up one of his two shares to be divided among them.[3] Consequently, the 'housekeepers' at Blackfriars after this decision were :—

C. Burbage, ...	1 share.
Mrs. Robinson, . . .	1 share.
Shank, ...	1 share.
Mrs. Condell, . . .	1 share.
Taylor, ...	1 share.
Lowin, ...	1 share.
Underwood, ...	1 share.
Benefield, Pollard, Swanston, ...	1 share.

If Swanston still held the one-third of a share which he had in 1634-5, he would have two-thirds of a share.

[1] Outlines, i. 313. [2] Ibid., i. 314, 317.

[3] Outlines, i. 313. Mr. Fleay says regarding the Blackfriars shares in 1635, 'In the petitions and answers Blackfriars is touched on more lightly than the Globe, only one interest being concerned, Swanston's, who desired to buy one of Shank's shares' (Stage, 327). This in spite of the following statements in the 1635 documents—'That for the house in Blackfriers . . .

III

(Concerning the value of shares in the Globe and Blackfriars Dr. Wallace says: 'The shares originally in both Globe and Blackfriars cost the partners simply the rent and the obligations they took upon them for building and for management of the business. It is not true, as stated 35 years later to the Lord Chamberlain, that the partners there named had their shares of the Burbages for nothing. . . .

'What was one of these shares worth? The value varied from time to time. But this suit, occurring in the last year of Shakespeare's life, 1615-16, tells what they were then worth.

'Thomasina Osteler declares that one-seventh of the Blackfriars, as a property or commodity that would produce an income for 15 years yet to come, had a present market value of £300, and that the value of one-fourteenth of the Globe, likewise as a property that would produce an income for 15 years yet to come, was also £300. This estimate means that the market value of the Blackfriars in 1614 was £2,100, and of the Globe £4,200.')

In addition to the details already mentioned, various interesting items about the business affairs at the Globe and Blackfriars are to be found in the 1635 documents.

(1) Besides the 'housekeepers' and 'actor-sharers,' the King's company contained hired-men and boys. These were paid out of the 'actor-sharers'' part of the income (Outlines, i. 312-313).

(2) The charges for hired-men, boys, music, lights, etc., at the Globe amounted to £900 or £1000 per annum, or on an average about £3 a day. In addition to this there were the charges for 'apparell and poetes' when a new play was produced (Outlines, i. 313).

(3) According to Benefield, Pollard and Swanston, the 'housekeepers' did not pay over '65 li. per annum rent for both houses, towardes which they rayse betweene 20 and 30 li. per annum from the tap-howses and a tenement and a garden belonging to the premises, etc.' (Outlines, i. 313).

Mr. Shankes haveing two partes thereof . . . that the sayd Mr. Shankes may assigne over one of the sayd partes amongst them three, they giveing him such satisfaccion for the same as that hee bee noe looser therby' (Outlines, i. 312). 'And as for the house of the Blackfriers, that Mr. Shankes, who now injoyes two partes there, may sell them likewise one, to bee divided amongst them three [i.e. Swanston, Benefield and Pollard].' (Outlines, i. 314, 319.)

Shank, however, says that the rent of the two theatres amounted to £100 per annum (Outlines, i. 316).

(4) About 1633 Shank paid W. Hemings £156 for a six-year share in Blackfriars and a two-year share in the Globe; the share in Blackfriars being subject to a yearly rent of £6, 5s. 0d. About a year later he gave £350 for a five-year share in Blackfriars and two one-year shares in the Globe. Why he paid so much more for the second lot of shares does not appear (Outlines, i. 314).

(5) If all the eight shares in Blackfriars were subject to the same rent as Shank's first share, the total yearly rent of that theatre about 1633 would be £50.

(6) Shank says that Swanston paid £20 for one-third of a six-year share in Blackfriars about 1633 (Outlines, i. 314-316). That is £60 for a whole six-year share, or £10 for a one-year share. From this one-third of a share Swanston received during 1634-5 an income of £34. Shank himself paid, about 1634, £60 for what Swanston had paid £20 for, i.e. £180 for a five-year share in Blackfriars, or £36 for a one-year share. As, then, in 1634, Shank gave £350 for one five-year share in Blackfriars and two one-year shares in the Globe, he must have paid £170 for the Globe shares, or at the rate of £85 for a one-year share. Consequently it is clear that a Globe share was worth over twice as much as a Blackfriars share.

(7) Swanston, Benefield and Pollard received £180 during 1634-5 as 'actor-sharers' in the King's company (i.e. for services at the Globe and Blackfriars), according to Shank and C. Burbage (Outlines, i. 314-317). On the other hand, Swanston, Benefield and Pollard say, 'Upon a medium made of the gaynes of the howskeepers and those of the actors one day with another throughout the yeere, the petitioners will make it apparent that when some of the housekeepers share 12s. a day at the Globe, the actors share not above 3s.' (Outlines, i. 313). That is, an 'actor-sharer' got about £55 a year at the Globe. He would not get nearly so much at Blackfriars, so according to Swanston, Benefield and Pollard, an 'actor-sharer' of the King's company received under £100 a year for his services at both theatres. In contrast to this, still according to Swanston, Benefield and Pollard, a 'housekeeper' at the Globe received 12s. a day, or over £200 a year. As the Blackfriars shares were under half the value of the Globe shares, a 'housekeeper' at Blackfriars probably received slightly under £100 a year (Swanston got £34 from a one-third Blackfriars share in 1634-5).

(8) The incomes of both 'housekeepers' and 'actor-sharers,' the value of shares, etc., must have varied greatly from year to year, particularly on account of the frequent closings of the theatres to avoid the spread of the plague. Burbage's statement 'humbly shewing to your honor the infinite charges, the manifold law-suites, the leases expiration, by the restraintes in sicknes times, and other accidents, that did cut from them the best part of the gaines that your honor is informed they have receaved' (Outlines, i. 317), probably contains a great deal of truth.

(9) In 1635, when the suit of Swanston, Benefield and Pollard was begun, there were six 'housekeepers' and nine 'actor-sharers' at the Globe, twelve sharers in all, as three of the 'housekeepers' were also 'actor-sharers' (Outlines, i. 313).

(10) About 1633 the lessees of the Globe had a suit pending with Sir Matthew Brend, as Shank puts it: 'When your suppliant purchased his partes, hee had noe certainty therof more then for one yeere in the Globe, and there was a chargeable suit then pending in the Court of Requestes betweene Sir Mathew Brend, knight, and the leesees of the Globe and their assignes, for the adding of nine yeeres to their lease in consideration that they and their predecessors had formerly beene at the charge of 1400 li. in building of the sayd house upon the burning downe of the former, &c.' (Outlines, i. 316). According to Shank, in 1635, 'they had not the assurance perfected by Sir Mathew Brend,' though Swanston, Benefield and Pollard speak as though the matter had been settled in favour of the Globe lessees (Outlines, i. 312).

(11) A 'housekeeper's' share in the Globe or Blackfriars was obtained by 'antiquity and desert' as well as the necessary money payment. In 1635 C. Burbage did not consider that Swanston, Benefield or Pollard had a right to such a share by 'antiquity or desert,' though Swanston had been connected with the King's company about ten years (joined c. 1625; cf. i. opp. 315), Benefield about seventeen years (joined c. 1618; cf. i. opp. 172), and Pollard about eighteen years (joined c. 1617; cf. i. opp. 172). Surely Burbage's idea of 'antiquity' of service was over-exacting, whatever the 'desert' of these men might be, and so thought the Earl of Pembroke, before whom their petition was tried, for he granted their request. Burbage also objects to them that they 'were never bred from children in the King's service'; which seems to indicate that it was customary in the King's company to recruit their men-actors from the boys they had themselves trained.

(12) Shank states that he had no hopes of renewing his shares when the lease ran out. Why, is not indicated (Outlines, i. 314).

The Banbury Trial of Richard Bradshaw's Company [1]

On May 6, 1633, the Mayor and Justices of Banbury wrote to the Privy Council concerning a company of players :—

'To the Right Honourable, the most honoured Lords, the Lords of his Maties most honor^ble Privy Council, present this.

'Right Hon^BLE,—Our humble service to your Lordships premised, etc. We make bold to send to your Lordships herewithal a Patent of licence, pretended by the bearers of it to be graunted by his Matie, and a commission from the M^r. of the Revels. The patent we suspect, the commission we find rased: howsoever, we find the parties (who have gone abroad into divers counties with the same) wandering Rogues, if not more dangerous persons, as may appeare by their examinations (which we have also sent to your Lordships), in which is apparent how they have changed their names &c. There be six of them, all which we have committed to the prison of our Borough, where we shall keep them safe, till your Lordships pleasure be signified to us. And so we humbly take our leaves, resting, 'Your Lordship's humble servants.

'Will^M Allen, Mayor.
'Thomas Whately, Justis.
'May 6, 1633. 'Thomas Halled, Justis.' [2]

With this letter was enclosed the examination of the players :—

'i. Examination of Bartholomew Jones. Has gone with this company up and down the country these two years, [1] Cf. above, 106 f.

and has acted his part in divers places. They played by virtue of this commission at Leicester, Market Bosworth, Stanton, Solihull, Meriden, and Stratford, at Sir Thomas Lucy's, and divers other places. At Coventry and other places where they played not they received rewards. The commission under the privy seal was one Edward Whiting's, and he and Richard Bradshaw were partners, and were both gone to London. 2nd May 1633.'[1]

'ii. Further examination of the same. Bradshaw bought the commission of Edward Whiting at Nottingham some two years since. They made use of this commission because the other was out of date. He saw Bradshaw pay Whiting three pieces for this commission. Bradshaw went from Keinton, co. Warwick, on Saturday last towards London. Appointed to meet them on Monday next at Thame, co. Oxford. The commission from the Master of the Revels was rased by one of their company that is gone from them. The Master of the Revels will give allowance to the raising if he be paid. 3rd May 1633.'

'iii. Examination of Richard Whiting of Cothelston, near Derby. Has been with this company of players about half a year. Met his father, Edward Whiting, in Cornwall. Thence they came to Bristol. Has acted a part with these players lately in divers places; at Leicester, Stratford, Meriden, Solihull, at Sir William Spencer's, and Sir Thomas Lucy's. On Saturday last they came to Keinton and there they played three days. They could answer where they had the commission under the privy seal well enough. 2nd May 1633.'

'iv. Further examination of the preceding. His name is Richard Johnson, alias Bea . . . , and that Richard Bradshaw, his master, bought the commission and the motion of Edward Whiting, of Nottingham, a surgeon. Bradshaw is gone to London to renew the commission and to bring more company. He appointed to meet them at Marlow in Bucks. The commission from the Master of the Revels was out of date in January last, and it was rased and made June. Bradshaw bought the commission, with the privy seal, and the show, of Edward Whiting the last summer at Nottingham. 3rd May 1633.'

[1] Cal. State Papers, Domestic Series, 1633-1634.

'v. Examination of Edward Damport. Has gone with the company up and down the country playing stage plays these two years last past. His father promised his master, Edward Whiting, that he should serve him seven years. His old master had the commission under the privy seal which is now in question, before it came to him. His old master, Edward Whiting, liveth in Coventry, and is now in London. They played under this commission lately at Meriden, Solihull, and other places. At Keinton they played twice or thrice, and came from thence this Thursday morning. 2nd May 1633.'

'vi. Further examination of the same. His master's name is Richard Bradshaw. Heard that Edward Whiting let the commission to some man that pawned it. He was at Nottingham when his master gave 20s. in earnest for this commission, and was to pay either 10l. or 20l., and gave bond for the money. Whiting made assignment thereof, and the money was to be paid at the year's end. His master had the commission before he bought it, and delivered it up to Whiting, who gave it back to Bradshaw. 3rd May 1633.'

'vii. Examination of Drewe Turner. Has been with this company of players these twelve months. Does nothing but drive the horse and beat the drum. Knows not where his master dwells, nor whether his master has a wife, nor does he know anything concerning the commission in question. 2nd May 1633.'

'viii. Further examination of the same. Richard Bradshaw is his master, and Edward Whiting and Bradshaw were partners and went together. 3rd May 1633.'

'ix. Examination of Robert Houghton. Came to this company the Thursday before Easter last, and played his part in stage plays at Sir William Spencer's [and] at Keinton two or three days this week. Received nothing but meat and drink from them. 2nd May 1633.'

'x. Further examination of the same. Edward Whiting let the commission in question to William Cooke and Fluellen Morgan, and they two went with it with a puppet-play until they had spent all, then they pawned the commission for four shillings. Mr. Bradshaw, hearing of it, redeemed, and afterwards bought it. 3rd May 1633.'

'xi. Examination of Richard Collewell. Has been with this company two years past, and is servant to Edward Whiting. They lay at Leicester five weeks and played there, and from thence went to the next town and played there. At Coventry they had a reward, but played not. Played at Solihull, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday this last week. Were at Keinton and played stage plays Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday last. His master went from Keinton on Saturday last towards London. 2nd May 1633.'

'xii. Further examination of the same. The commission under the privy seal was bought by his master, Bradshaw, of Edward Whiting of Nottingham. 3rd May 1633.'

On May 22, 1633, the Privy Council answered the authorities of Banbury as follows :—

'May 22, 1633.

'We have seen your letters of the 6th of this instant moneth, as also a patent of Licence pretended to be graunted by his Majestie, a Commission from the Master of the Revels, and the examinations of those delinquents, being (as you say) wandering rouges and daungerous persons ; and [as] we concur with you in opinion, that there may be forgerie and rasure, both in the said Patent and in the Commission, so we doe approve, and comend the discreete course you have taken in committing them to the common prison of your Burrough. Now, to the end that this abuse may be farther searched and examined, we doe hereby require and authorise you, to cause Jones and the rest of his complices (being five more) that are detained under restraint, to be released, and forthwith delivered to this bearer, Robert Cross, one of the Messengers of his Majesties Chamber ; who hath warrant from this Board to receive them at your hands, and to bring them hether to answer before us for the crymes and misdemeanours wherewith they stand charged, and thereupon to be proceeded withall according to the quality of their offences, and the common lawes and justice of this Kingdom. And so, etc.—Signed Lord Keeper, Lord Privie Seale, etc.' [1]

[1] Collier, i. 474-475.

Having quoted the above letter, Collier states further, 'A warrant having been made out on the same day to Robert Cross, to take into his custody the six persons above named, he brought them to London by June 3rd; and on that day they "tendered their appearance," and it was directed that they should "remain in the Messenger's custody till further order." Perhaps the players satisfied the Privy Council, that they had acted at Banbury under sufficient authority; for, on the next day, the following entry is made in the Register:—"June 4th, 1633, This day the players, formerly sent for from Banbury, were discharged out of the Messenger's custody, upon bond given to be forthcoming whensoever they should be called for."'[1]

The Relation of the Plague to the closing of the Theatres, 1558-1642

Mr. Fleay, in his History of the Stage, advances the following theory about the relation of the plague to the closing of the London theatres :—'In the reigns of James and Charles the plagues were so frequent that the theatres were often closed in consequence. This took place whenever the deaths from the plague amounted to forty per week.' In support of his theory he offers this evidence : 'Allusions to this regulation are numerous, and its exactness can be shown by comparing Henslowe's Diary with the plague-table for 1593. From the Diary it appears (p. 5) that acting ceased on May 3, and (p. 31) that it recommenced 27th December. From the mortality-table I find that the number of forty was reached on April 28, and maintained till December 15 ; it fell to thirty-nine on December 22. This year was one of the great Plague years, the deaths from plague amounting to 11,503.' [1]

The first thing to be noted from this evidence is that Mr. Fleay's theory deals not only with the period under James I. and Charles I., but also under Elizabeth as far back as 1593.

On examination this evidence proves to be untrustworthy. First, as regards the mortality-table for 1593, about which Mr. Fleay says, 'The Bill of Mortality is extant, and the deaths from the Plague were over forty per week, from 28th April to December 22.' [2] Actually, there is no extant bill of mortality for 1593 which gives the weekly deaths from the plague. There is, however, a list professing to be the [1] Stage, 162. Mr. Fleay's references to Henslowe's Diary are, of course, to Collier's edition.

[2] Stage, 94.

weekly death rate for 1593, published in an anonymous essay of 1665, called Reflections on the Bills of Mortality, but this is inaccurate and considered by the best authorities not to refer to 1593. Professor Creighton thus speaks of it: 'At the same time a table was given, professing to be of the weekly deaths from all causes, in one column, and from plague in another, from March 13 to December 18, 1593. The column of plague-deaths sums up to 11,110, but the total of 11,503 (which originated in a misprint) is printed at the foot of the column as if that were the summation. The column of deaths from all causes is made to sum up at 25,886, the actual sum being 25,817. But the weekly mortalities in it for those weeks that had little plague are an absurdity for 1593. Whatever the source of this table, it is not genuine for 1593, and was disclaimed by Bell, the clerk of Parish Clerks' Hall, whose essay was written in 1665 to correct that and other errors about former plagues in London.' [1]

Second, Mr. Fleay's statement that the companies ceased acting in London on May 3, 1593, is based on the entry in Henslowe's Diary which says that Philip Henslowe lent Francis Henslowe on that date the sum of £15 'for his share to the Quenes players when they broke & went into the contrey to playe.' [2] But this entry almost certainly refers to May 3, 1594, and not to 1593.[3] When the London companies ceased acting in 1593 is uncertain, but it was probably about February, for on Feb. 1, Lord Strange's men stopped playing at the Rose,[4] and by April the Lord Admiral's company were acting in York.[5]

So much for the evidence on which Mr. Fleay bases his theory that the London theatres were closed when the plague deaths rose to 40 a week; now for the theory itself. The attitude of the city authorities towards plays in the city during plague time is made sufficiently clear by the following communications from them to the Privy Council in 1575-6: (1) 'But touching the permission of playes vpon the fewnesse of those that dye in any weke, it may please you to remember one special thing. In the report of the plage we report only those that dye, and we make no report of those that recover, and cary infection about them, either in their sores running, or in their garments, which sort are most dangerous. Now, my lord, when the number of those that dye groweth fewest, the number of those that goe abrode with sores is greatest, the violence of the disease to kill being abated. And therefore while any plage is, though the number reported of them that dye be small, the number infectious is so great, that playes are not to be permitted.

'Also, in our report none are noted as dyeng of the plage except thay have tokens; but many dye of the plage that have no tokens; and sometime fraude of the searchers may deceive. Therefore it is not reason to reduce their toleration to any number reported to dye of the plage; but it is an uncharitable demaund against the safetie of the Quenes subjects, and per consequens of her person, for the gaine of a few, whoe if they were not her Ma^tles servaunts should by their profession be rogues, to esteme fifty a weke so small a number as to be cause of tolerating the adventure of infection.

'If your Lordships shal think resonable to permit them in respect of the fewnesse of such as dye, this were a better way. The ordinaire deaths in London when there is no plage, is betwene XL. and L. and commonly under XL., as our bokes do shew: the residue, or more in plage time, is to be thought to be the plage: now, it may be enough if it be permitted, that when the whole death of all diseases in London shal, by ii or iii wekes together, be under L. a weke, they may play (observatis alioqui observandis) during such time of death vnder L. a weke.'

(2) 'That they play not openly till the whole death in London have ben by xx daies vnder 50 a weke, nor longer than it shal so continue.'[1]

From these communications it appears likely that prior to 1575-6, when the plague deaths rose to 50 a week the theatres were closed, and that, after 1575-6 the theatres in the City proper, which were under the jurisdiction of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, were closed whenever the 'whole deaths' reached 50 a week, while in the suburbs, where the Privy Council held sway, the old regulation of

[1] Collier, i. 215-217.

50 plague deaths a week causing the closing of the theatres was continued.

Until 1603 there is no evidence of any change in these regulations. During that year, however, the rough draft of the licence placing the Earl of Worcester's company under the patronage of Queen Anne permitted them 'to show and exercise publikly, when the infection of the plague shall decrease to the nomber of thirty weekly within [our Cetie of] London, and the liberties [therof], as well within there now usuall howsen, called the Curtayne and the Bores head, within our County of Middlesex &c.' [1]

The next year, on April 9, the Privy Council sent a letter to the Lord Mayor and the justices of Middlesex and Surrey, requiring them to permit 'the three Companies of Plaiers to the King, Queene and Prince publicklie to exercise ther Plaies in ther several and vsuall howses for that purpose and noe other, vz. The Globe scituate in Maiden Lane on the Banckside in the Cowntie of Surrey, the Fortune in Goldinge Lane, and the Curtaine in Hollywelle in the Cowntie of Midlesex . . . except ther shall happen weeklie to die of the Plague above the number of thirtie.' [2]

When the plague deaths reached thirty a week, not only were the theatres closed, but much of the public business in London was stopped. This is clearly shown by the following letter dated Oct. 12, 1605, and printed in Winwood's Memorials: 'The sudden riseing of the sickness to thirty a week and the infesting of nineteen parishes, made us think the Term, or Parliament, or both, might be prolonged and put off, but the abating of some few this week makes us all hold on.' [3]

A later reference to the closing of the theatres when the plague deaths reached thirty a week occurs in Middleton's Your Five Gallants, acted in 1607,: [4] ''tis e'en as uncertain as playing, now up and now down; for if the bill down rise to above thirty, here 's no place for players.'

From c. 1603 to c. 1608, then, the theatres were closed whenever the weekly number of plague deaths exceeded thirty. After this the number seems to have been changed to forty. Why, we can only guess ; possibly it was because the Court took pity on the uncertain lives the players had been living during the last few years, and used its influence with the City authorities.[1] The earliest indication we have of this change is the following passage in Ram Alley, or Merry Tricks, printed Nov. 9, 1610, and probably acted in 1609 : 'I dwindle as a new player does at a plague bill certified forty.'[2] In the 1620 licence of the 1, King's men, they are allowed to play at the Globe and Blackfriars 'when the infection of the plague shall not weekely exceed the nomber of fortie by the certificate of the Lord Mayor of London for the time being.'[3] Still later, during 1636-7, Sir Henry Herbert made the following entries in his office-book : 'At the increase of the plague to 4[1] within the citty and 54 in all.—This day the 12 May, 1636, I received a warrant from my lord Chamberlain for the suppressing of playes and shews, and at the same time delivered my severall warrants to George Wilson for the four companys of players, to be served upon them.' 'On thursday morning the 23 of February the bill of the plague made the number at forty foure [the true number was 38], upon which decrease the king gave the players their liberty, and they began the 24 February 1636 [1636-7].' 'The plague encreasinge, the players laye still untill the 2 of October, when they have leave to play [the plague deaths had been below 40 since Aug. 24].'[4] From c. 1608 to 1642, then, there can be little doubt that the London theatres were closed whenever the weekly plague deaths exceeded forty.

To this theory, especially to that part of it which holds that after c. 1608 the theatres were closed when the weekly plague deaths exceeded forty, Mr. Thorndike strenuously objects, apparently because he thinks it interferes with the probable dates of some of Beaumont and Fletcher's plays and Jonson's Epicœne.[5] He bases his argument

[1] This uncertainty is spoken of in the following passage from Middleton's A Mad World, my Masters, probably acted c. 1606 (Drama, ii. 92)—'But for certain players, there thou liest, boy, they were never more uncertain in their lives : now up, and now down ; they know not where to play, or what to play, nor when to play for fearful fools' (v. i.) ; cf. also Dekker's Seven Deadly Sins of London, printed Oct. 6, 1606.

almost entirely on a consideration of the evidence forthcoming during the years 1608-9. There is, he says, 'very definite evidence' that the London theatres were not closed during these years. This evidence he states thus, 'On the 5th of April 1609, J. Hemings was paid for twelve plays performed at court by the King's men the Christmas before; and on the same date there was a payment for three plays by the Prince's men, presumably also given in the Christmas season 1608-9.' He considers that it would be highly improbable that the 'travelling companies were summoned back to London to play at court during the plague,' and that it would be 'more likely' that 'the companies were playing in London both at the time of the court performance and the later payment.'

Mr. Thorndike, in these statements, rather ignores the mortality-tables (he acknowledges that he has not consulted them, except in the summaries given by Mr. Fleay)[1] and the relations of the provincial and London stages. It is, of course, barely possible that the King's and Prince's players, who acted at Court during Christmas, 1608-9, were acting publicly in London for a little while during the Christmas season. By Dec. 22, 1608, the plague deaths had fallen to 53, and by Dec. 29, to 39; they were up again to 56 by Jan. 5, increased to 60 by Jan. 12, and to 81 by Jan. 19. It may be that after the return of 39 on Dec. 29, the authorities permitted the opening of the theatres, but when the Jan. 5 return of 56 came in they would almost certainly order them closed again; and that the theatres were allowed to remain open with the plague deaths rising to 81 by Jan. 19 is inconceivable. It seems very doubtful, however, if the authorities would allow the theatres to be opened on Dec. 30, after the return of 39—practically at the limit 40—especially considering that in 1574 the Mayor and Aldermen had insisted on a period of twenty days elapsing after the weekly returns were sufficiently reduced, to be sure that the decrease was not merely temporary.[2] That the theatres were open during April, when the plague deaths ranged from 73 to 99 a week is impossible.

But even though the theatres were not open during the Christmas period of 1608-9, it is highly probable that the London companies were waiting in or near London for the plague deaths, which had been steadily decreasing since Dec. 1, to fall below 40 a week. If so, there is no reason why the Court plays should not have been given. From Dec. 22 to Jan. 5, the plague deaths were comparatively few, and the danger from two chosen companies, the King's and Prince's, lately returned from the provinces, where there was comparatively little plague,[1] performing before the Court, all precautions being taken, was very small.

Neither is there anything inconsistent with stage history in supposing that these companies returned to London on the chance of performing at Court, though they knew the theatres would not be opened for some time. Their rewards in the country were comparatively small,[2] their standing depended almost entirely on the favour of their royal patrons, they were members of the royal household, and their first duty was to play before the royal family when so desired.[3]

Finally, there are recorded several visits of the King's, Queen's, and Prince's companies to provincial towns during 1608,[4] showing conclusively that these companies did travel during that year.

Mr. Thorndike's second piece of 'very definite evidence,' he states thus, 'There is, in fact, no evidence that theatres, pageants, or business in general were to any extent interrupted by the plague of 1608-9. The Masque of Queens was performed Feb. 2, 1609, before the royal family at Whitehall; the king and royal family visited the Tower, June 23, 1609, and the Bourse (new Exchange) was dedicated April 10, 1609. Moreover, in April, 1609, we find a patent granted to the Queen's players "to shewe and exercise publickly as well within their nowe usual houses called the Redd Bull &c."'[5]

But there is evidence that business was interrupted by [3] In the travelling licence granted to Lord Strange's men on May 6, 1593, when they were driven from London by the plague, the theatres being closed, it is expressly stated that the licence was granted that the players might keep themselves in practice in their art in order to be ready to play before the Queen when required (cf. i. 87).

the plague during 1608-9. 'On September 12 [1608] Lord Chancellor Ellesmere writes from Ashbridge (Berkhamstead) to the Secretary of State that he will remain away until he is fully sure of his London house being clear of the infection. On September 20, the City ditch [in whose neighbourhood the plague was usually severest] was being cleaned out, and Parliament was put off until February. On November 26, a letter from the Court at Newmarket states that the king is angry that my Lord Chamberlain has not sent him the bill of sickness.'[1] That the Masque of Queens was presented on Feb. 2, 1609, at Whitehall by the Queen and her ladies, is no evidence that the public theatres were open in London. Unless the plague was exceptionally severe the Court pageants went forward as usual. On July 10, 1603, J. Chamberlain wrote to Dudley Carleton, 'Paul's grows very thin for every man shrinks away. Our pageants are pretty forward, but most of them are such small-timbered gentlemen that they cannot last long, and I doubt, if the plague cease not sooner, they will riot and sink where they stand.'[2] When this was written the plague deaths in London were between 260 and 400 a week. The visit of James to the Tower on June 23, 1609, was during a lull in the ravages of the plague, which on June 15 had fallen to 36 a week, and was 43 on June 22, and 47 on June 29. The dedication of the new Exchange during the week of April 10, though the plague was up to 73, could hardly be regarded as dangerously threatening a spread of infection if proper precautions were taken. When the Patent of April, 1609, was granted to the Queen's players the plague was certainly severe, the bills of April 6, 13, 20, and 27, reading 73, 93, 86, and 99 respectively, but Mr. Thorndike has failed to quote the essential point of this licence; it was a travelling as well as a London license.[3] That the company used it for travelling is clear, for they appeared in Coventry sometime after June.[4] Some public business was performed no matter how severe the plague. Thus on July 25, 1603, when the plague deaths were between 600 and 1000 a week in the city, James I. was crowned at Westminster Abbey.[5]

Mr. Thorndike's next piece of evidence, that the theory that 40 plague deaths a week closed the theatres, makes it necessary to date Jonson's Epicœne in 1610 instead of 1609, is of slight importance, for even granted that 1609 is the correct date, which is very doubtful,[1] there is no improbability in supposing that during the closing of the theatres in 1609, the Children of Her Majesty's Revels, while travelling, produced Epicœne in anticipation of being called upon to act before the Court at Christmas, 1609-10. It is unlikely that with Court performances in view they would practise only old plays.[2]

Finally, that there is no mention of this regulation in the licences of Jan. 30, 1604 (Her Majesty's Revels), April 30, 1607 (Prince's men), March 30, 1610 (Duke of York's men), Jan. 4, 1613 (Palsgrave's men), and May 30, 1615 (Rossiter's company),[3] does not interfere with our theory, for during 1604, 1607, 1610 till July, 1613 and 1615, there was very little plague in London.

Mr. Thorndike's objections having been disposed of, it seems safe to conclude that prior to 1575-6, when the plague deaths rose to 50 a week the theatres were closed, and that from 1575-6 to c. 1603 the theatres in the City proper were closed whenever the 'whole deaths' reached 50 a week, while in the suburbs the old regulation of 50 plague deaths a week causing the closing of the theatres was continued. From c. 1603 to c. 1608 the theatres were closed when the weekly plague deaths exceeded 30, and from c. 1608 to 1642 when they were over 40.

IX. Bridport.

(c. End James I.)

Item gave the princes players . . 10^{s}.

1630. In this year a case was tried at Bridport at the Michaelmas Sessions. William Sands the Elder, John Sands and William Sands the Younger, and about nine others, it is stated, who wander up and down the country with blasphemous shows and sights which they exercise by means of puppet-playing, not only by day but late in the night, are arrived at Beaminster, so that the townsmen cannot keep their children and servants in their houses. The Court, considering the scarcity of corn and other victuals and the extremity likely to come on the poor by reason of the said dearth, ordered Sands to leave the county. The preacher at Beaminster, not the Vicar probably, but one of the Puritan licensed preachers, had assailed Sands and his show in his Sunday sermon.[3] [6] The account book for 1535-6 is lost.

[7] Apparently the Pageant of St. Thomas was not given this year as there are no payments for repairs, etc., in the account books. It was again given in 1539-40. Noblemen's companies are mentioned for the first time this year.

[1] 1541-42. 'p^rma Sessio. Itm payd in reward to Peryn the Kyngs bereward, iiii^s.' It is the first payment to a bearward in these accounts. It is followed by 'Itm payd and spent at the fflower, delyve vppon (m̃) mayer of Dover and dyv^rse other honest men of the same town byfore the tyme of ye pley, iiii^s.'

[2] The next entry is 'Itm gevyn in reward to the kyngs mynstrells, vi^s viii^d.' Possibly they accompanied the King's players. There are many interesting entries this year about the local play and players, such as 'Itm paid for drynk gevyn to the pleyers at dyvs tymes in the Courthall, x^s., Itm paid to Master lewys due to hym of the money of the pley, xii^d.,' etc. Judging by the following entry the stage of the play was sold after use, 'Receyved of Maister Batheise for the hole stage of the play to hym sold, xl^s.'

[3] 1543-44. 'Itm paid to the kyngs bereward in reward on and beside the benyvolens of M^r mayer and his brethern, . iiii^s.'

[4] 'iiii^ta Sess. Itm gevyn in rewarde to the Kyngs Jestor, . ii^s.' Next year he received iii^s iiii^d, and the King's bearward, iii^s iiii^d.

[1] In this year the town paid xx^{s} to 'my Lord of Huntyngdons mynstrells,' the same amount to the 'Deuke of Suffolks mynstrells,' and also to the 'kyngs Jestor.' Why the amount of payments increased so materially this year we cannot say.

[2] Probably Lord Rochford. This year the 'lord Wardens mynstrells' received only xii^{s}, and in 1551-2 their reward fell to iii^{s} iiii^{d}. The King's bearward received vi^{s} viii^{d}.

Canterbury (Letters).

1557. 'The Privy Council, on the 27th June, 1557, wrote a letter to John Fuller, Mayor of Canterbury, thanking him for his diligence "in the apprehending and comitting of the players to warde, whom they are willed to keep, untill they shall receive orders from home, and in the meantime their lewde play boke is committed to the consideration of the King and Queene's Majesty's learned counsell, who are willed to declare what the same waieth unto in law, whereupon they shall receive further order touching the said players."'

'August 11th, 1557, the Mayor and the Aldermen of Canterbury are ordered to proceed against the said players "touching the same lewde playe."'[1]

[1] After this year entries of payments to bearwards, musicians and schoolmasters are omitted unless bearing directly on dramatic performances, or of especial interest.

[2] This year is entered in the records 1577; certainly a mistake, as the regular accounts for 1577 are given in their proper place.

[3] The next entry is 'Paid to a pore precher, v^{s}.'

[4] Probably the scribe's way of spelling 'place.'

[1] The last four entries under 1579 are successive.

[2] I have given all the entries to bearwards, etc., as well as players to show the new way of grouping these payments in the records. Apparently the chamberlain's total is inaccurate.

[3] In each year after 1580 I have given the chamberlain's total yearly expenses for players, musicians, bearwards, etc., as given by him under that heading, though, as before, I have only noted those items dealing with players.

[1] There are no entries to bearwards or musicians this year.

[2] The extraordinary number of visits of players this year may be in part accounted for by the fact that the London theatres were closed during a portion of the year because of the plague. During the year occurs an account of the town officials going out to meet James as he approached the city on his triumphal march toward London.

[1] Most likely players.

[2] Why the town was so niggardly this year we cannot tell.

[3] Possibly the new form of entry this year signifies that the Mayor was scrutinising more carefully the payments made to players. The constant mention of 'a bill under Mr. Mayor's hand' would appear to indicate that his authorisation in writing was necessary before the Warden or Chamberlain could pay the players.

[1] Possibly the 'Lord Willoughby's men' were not players. The payment is very small for a dramatic company.

[2] The next entry 'Given to the Earle of Worcesters musicions, iis iiid, shows the comparative amounts paid to players and musicians at this time It also seems to indicate that 'a bill under Mr. Mayor's hand' was not necessary for their payment. We find in 1615, however, 'Gyven to the Lords of Councell their Trumpetors as appeareth by a bill, vs.'

[3] These two entries probably refer to the same company.

XXXI. Kendal.

1586. Sept. 22. 'Whereas very many of the common inhabitants of the borough, preferring their own private commodities and the customs of usage to the benefit and common wealth of all others, covet and earnestly cry for the having of Corpus Cristi play yearly as in former time, without allowing any occasion for the omission thereof in any year, it is ordained that the Alderman or his deputy shall not have power to give licence for the play of Corpus Cristi, or for any other stage play, without the consent of a majority of the Burgesses.'[1]

XXXII. Kenilworth.

1575. July. For an account of the festivities at Kenilworth when the Earl of Leicester entertained Queen Elizabeth there in July, 1575, cf. Robert Laneham's Letter (Ed. F. J. Furnivall for New Shakespere Society. 1890); Progresses of Elizabeth, John Nichols, i. 420 etc.; The Princelye Pleasures at the Courte at Kenelworth, G. Gascoigne, 1576 (in Nichols, i. 502). It seems probable the Leicester's company took part in this entertainment, though there is no definite evidence of this being the case.

1660, Oct. 8.

From the Mayor and Recorder of Maidstone to Sir Henry Herbert.

Maidstone 8th Octr. 1660.

Honorable Sir,—We received yours the sixth instant by these bearers, and question not your commission, as Master of his Majesties Revells or your license granted to these persons, Jacob Brewer, &c., nor them, so farre as they shall use the same according to lawe, to which your licence doth prudently and carefully tye them, one particular of which theyre lawfull exercise we conceive to be within the verge of his Majestie's Courte, wherever it shall be in any parte of England, where they may be under your eye and care for the reforming and regulating any abuses of their license which might be committed by them. But we doe not finde that you doe and presume you did not intend to, grant them a licence to wander abroad over all England at what distance soever from you. And we find that the wandering abroad of such persons is expressly cautioned by the statut of the 39th of the Queen, in the case of players of interludes and minstrels (except it be by express license under the hand & seale of such Baron or other noble of greater degree to whom they do particularly belong :) and however we know no law or statut that requires the Magistrates of any place to give them any particular leave or license of their own by way of addition to any other, and the mischief and publicke disorders by the practices of such kind of persons in wandering abroade from countye to countye is such that we cannot think it reasonable to give them any further countenance than the lawe provides; which we hope will not be displeasing to you who, we presume, do take the observance of his majestie's lawes to the best obedience to his majesties authoritye. In which assurance we take leave, and rest, Honorable Sir Youre most humble servants

RICHARD BILLS, Mayor
LAMBARDE GODFREY, Recorder.

To the Hon Sir Henry Herbert knight Master of his Majestie's Revels these humbly present.

(Endorsed). From the Mayor of Maidstone and the Recorder, concerning Jacob Brewer dancer on the Ropes.[1]

From Sir Henry Herbert to the Mayor of Maidstone
Oct 9–1660 from the office of the Revells.

Sir yours of the 8th comes to my hand the 9th of this monthe, and makes out an acknowledgement and submission to his Majesties grante, as Master of his Majestie's Revels, and to the powers of lycencinge the persons in question, and to their exercise of the said powers, so farre as they shall use the same accordinge unto lawe; but you restrained the exercise thereof to the verge of his Majesties Court and then restraine the master of the Revels to the said limits, as to his Jurisdiction; which is in some sort, a contradiction; and such an interpretation as was never given before by any learned Gentleman. The Licence is granted upon condition of good behaviour to the lawes and ordinances of superiors. But you are not taken to be a capacity by virtue of your character, to suppress them, they bearing themselves as they ought to doe, and there is non obstante in the concession, which provides against the penall lawes, which being under the greate seale of England, and corroborated by a constant practice, whereof the memorie of man is not to be contrarie.

I conceive you will not be the sole infringer of his majesties grantes and the constant practice thereof in all his Majesties dominions and liberties in England. And you may be asured by me that you are the first Mayor or other officer that ever did dispute the authority, or the extent of it, for to confine it to the verge of the court, is such a sense as was never imposed upon it before, and contrary to the constant practice for several grantes have been made by me, since the happy restoration of our gracious sovereign, to persons in the like quality, and seriously therefore, admitted into all counties and liberties of England without any dispute or molestation.

You are therefore desired to give them leave to exercise their qualities, accordinge to the condition of their license, the rather they have suffered much in lyinge still and are in their way to the seaside for transportation ; and I have given them order to stay noe longer than they have raised their necessary charges But in case you doe delighte in oposition and obstinacy to lawfull authority and yet would be obeyed in yours without dispute ; there you may take this from me that I shall forth with sende a message from his Majestie's chamber to fetche you and Mr Recorder Godfrey hither to answer your disobedience to his Majesties authority derived unto me under the greate seale of England and in exercise of the said powers by me for almost forty yeares without exception only of the late times and if you have endangered your character by this refracteriness, and doe put charges and displeasure on your corporation and persons you will remember that you were fairly invited to the contrary and admonished thereof by your very affectionate friend HENRY HERBERT

Respects to Mr Recorder Godfrey of whom I have hearde well by my cozen Lambarde and for whome I have a particular kindness [1]

NORWICH (LIBER RUBER CIVITATIS).

21 Jas I. 1623. May 27.

'To our very loving friends the Mayor and Justices of the City of Norwich.

'After our very hearty Commendations; whereas we have received information from Mr Gleane one of your aldermen that you have been of late years, and are at this present, much pestered and disquieted in the orderly government of your City by the reason of several companies of players, tumblers, dancers upon the ropes and the like, the suffering whereof is alleged to be more inconvenient and prejudicial to that City more than other places; by reason it consists altogether of much and several manufactures, wherein multitudes of people and families are set on work, who being apt to be drawn away from their business and labour by their occasion the sayd manufactures are in the mean time in such sort neglected as causeth daily very great and apparent losses and damage to that city in particular and by consequence no small hurt and prejudice to the commonwealth in general. We taking the same in our consideration and finding cause much to condemn the lawless liberty taken up and practised in all parts of the kingdom by that sort of vagrant and licentious rabble by whose means and devices the purses of poor servants and apprentices and of the meaner sort of people are drained and emptied and which pinches so much the more in these times of scarcity and dearth and we tendering the good and welfare of your city in particular have thought good hereby to authorize and require you not to suffer any Companies of players, tumblers or the like sort of persons to act any plays or to shew or exercise any other feats and devices within that city or the liberty of the same until you shall receive further order from this Board. So we bid you very heartily farewell.

From Whitehall 27 May 1623.

Your very loving friends

Midlesex, Mandeville, Arundell and Surey, G. Cant, F. Edmonds, Jull Cesar.' [1]

15 Chas I. 1640. March 15.

'Mr Mayor,

'Whereas I am informed by your worthy Burgesses for Parliament that your city of Norwich is much offended and molested with players, to the prejudice of your manufactures and the disturbance of the peace; These are therefore, in his Majesty's name, to charge and require all players within your said city, upon sight hereof, to forbear playing, and to depart your city in convenient time; and, in case of disobedience, to give you the Mayor, and other officers full power and authority to punish the foresaid players or any of them so offending, and them, or any of them, to commit to ward until they, or any of them, shall conform to this my warrant; and likewise to take from the said players or any of them, any licence they, or any of them, shall produce in that behalf. Dated this 15th of March 1640.

'HENRY HERBERT.

	Item, to Mr Niccolls for the Kinges players	xx^{s} [5]

[1] During the same year was entered, 'Item, paid to the Quenes berward, vi^{s} viii^{d}.'

[2] Followed by these items: 'Item, geven to the Quenes trumpeters, x^{s}.'; and 'Item, wyne and suger that Mr Mayor gaue them, ii^{s} vi^{d}.'

[3] Followed by 'Item, payed to the Quenes ma^{ties} servaunte that kepeth her game of beres, vi^{s} viii^{d}.'

[4] Followed by 'Item, to the Quene's bearerode, vi^{s} viii^{d}.'

[5] This and the following entries were copied from the Records of Oxford by J. O. Halliwell-Phillipps, and printed in his Visits of Shakespeare's Company of Actors to the Provincial Cities, etc. That this visit was in May or June, 1604, as he conjectures, seems improbable when we consider that the company did not reopen in London after the plague till about April, 1604. They would hardly leave London again in May or June. The visit to Oxford was probably before April.

LV. Perth.

'In 1574 the General Assembly passed a law as to performers of the drama requiring to receive permission ere theatricals could be performed in the town. The first application on record, and the only one in Perth so far as discovered, was made in 1589, when a company of players visited Perth in that year. They applied to the Consistory of the Church for a license, and produced a copy of the play which they intended to perform. The following extract shows that the request was granted :—

'Perth, June 3, 1589.—The "Minister and Elders gave license to play the play, with conditions that no swearing, banning, or any scurrility shall be spoken, which would be a scandal to our religion which we profess, and for an evil example to others. Also, that nothing shall be added to what is in the register of the play itself. If any one who plays shall do to the contrary he shall be warded and make his public repentance."

'In the Session record, the actors are spoken of as being all men.'[1]

[1] Matthews, 147.

[2] Matthews, 156. On p. 523, Mr. Matthews gives the following interesting account of ancient Cornish playing places,—'Plain-au-Gwarry (the playing plain) the ancient amphitheatre for the mystery plays at the Stennack, St. Ives. The "Gwail Miracle" or Miracle Play was a noteworthy feature in the life of a Cornish parish during the Middle Ages. This mediæval form of drama was carried on under the auspices of the clergy. . . . In most parishes there was a place set apart for these quasi-religious performances; it consisted everywhere of a circular pit or amphitheatre dug out of the ground, with several rows of seats like steps around the sides of the excavation—an imitation of the Roman arena. The level ground at the bottom constituted the stage where the performers played their parts. The subjects acted were incidents drawn either from the Scriptures or from the legendary lives of the saints. Such plays were written out in full, copies of some of them are still preserved and have been printed, such as the "Gureanz au bŷs" (Creation of the World) and the "Bewnanz Meriasce" (Life of Saint Meradochus). The best known of these amphitheatres which are still in existence are those near Redruth and at Saint Just Churchtown, known respectively as the Plain-au-Gwarry and the Roundago; also the Gwennap Pit near Saint Day. The name "Plain-au-Gwarry" is given to a piece of land at the Stennack in a deed of 1808, but has long been forgotten. At that date the land in question was an orchard.' Cf. also Chambers' Mediæval Stage, ii. 390.

LXVII. Stowmarket (Suffolk).

1590. '"The borough" did not provide for it [i.e. cock-fighting] on any of their reckoning days. They chose the more refined enjoyment of seeing plays and hiring players, whilst the "Upland" occasionally indulged in the barbarous pleasures of the cock-pit. On one occasion they provided four cocks for fighting at their reckoning day, at the parish expense. These expenses . . . were exclusively voluntary rates levied on themselves for any purpose they pleased, and amongst these were Routs, Reckninge dayes, Players, and Fighting Cocks.' [4]

1509-1540. 'From the 1st to the 31st Henry viii., the King's players, the King's Jugglers, the King's minstrels, and the King's bearwards were visitors of Thetford, and were paid various sums, from 4d. to 6s. 8d., by the Prior of the convent there, as appears by the entries in the account-book during that period. On one occasion, 16 Henry viii., Cornyshe, "master of the King's chapel," was paid 3s.4d. by the prior; but he was then, probably, attendant upon the King, who is not unfrequently spoken of as having arrived, and being lodged at the Priory. Mr. Brandon and Mr. Smith are more than once rewarded as "Jugglers of the King." The Queen's players, the Prince's players, and the players of the Queen of France, also experienced the liberality of the Prior, as well as those of the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl and Countess of Derby, Lord and Lady Fitzwater, the Lord Privy Seal, the Lord Chancellor, Sir Thomas Challoner and two gentlemen who are called Marks and Barney.'
